Starting This Summer, El Nino Effects May Actually Reverse

ANDY ANDREWS

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's own climatologist made his spring predictions for the state last week.

Expect a continued mild remainder of the winter, cool to cold temperatures, below to much below normal precipitation in the west, and normal to above-normal precipitation in the eastern half.

However, according to the statistical models of prediction, there could be a reverse for next winter, according to a presentation made at the 1998 Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference last week at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Paul Knight, state climatologist with the Penn State Department of Meteorology, said at the conference that based on numerical and statistical models, it looks like the "La Nina will be back," said Knight. If that happens, he noted, "watch out for extreme cold next winter."

According to Dr. Louis M. Thompson, emeritus associate dean of agriculture at Iowa State University who spoke at the Corn Conference six years ago, the La Nina is a Spanish phrase meaning "little girl." It is marked by high pressure which dominates over western South America and low pressure over Australia. When an El Nino (Spanish for "the boy") occurs, the patterns flip-flop, creating a situation of cool, rainy weather in California and the Southwest and drought in Australia and Indonesia.

What is El Nino? Generally, it's the natural phenomenon attributed to the warming of the Pacific Ocean waters west of South America and the central part of the ocean. Since the announcement was made about the El Nino effects, there has been such a

DHIA Reports Good Year

EVERETT NEWSWANGER

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania DHIA held its annual meeting Thursday and reported another successful year. General manager David Slusser said the organization "reported another profit, increased member equity, and paid off our major loan."

"Your cooperative accomplished a major change in direction over the last four years as a result of teamwork between the board, the employees, and the members," Slusser said. "The strategic long-range plan developed by the board has been enacted, and 1998 will see new services developed and new markets explored."

President Norm Hershey said that one of the goals met during 1997 was the retirement of debt of several years standing. "This did

Producers Seek Dairy Compact Legislation

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

GALETON (Potter Co.) — "Dairy farmers are going through critical financial and changing policy times. We need to have at our disposal all the tools we can possibly use," said Galeton dairy farmer Lewis Gardner.

"Dairy compacts," he added, "offer dairy producers another management tool."

Gardner, newly-elected chairman of the Northeast Council of Dairy Farmers of America, once opposed the concept of farmer's joining ranks to form compacts.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids finished steady to slightly higher at today's close. Fair overnight sales of wheat to South Korea put some strength into wheat bids along with reports of some tenders coming up. Corn bids were stronger on light fund buying on the board and slow farmer selling. Bean bids were up slightly due to improved crush margins and higher soy- bean oil demand. However, export demand continues very slow for all commodities, limiting gains. Wheat mostly steady. Corn steady to 2 cents higher. Sorghum steady to 1 cent lower. Soybeans 1 to 5 cents higher.

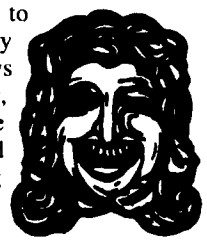
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

FEB. 23-MAR. 1, 1998

ASH WEDNESDAY, FEB. 25.

SHROVE TUESDAY

The 1804 [Old] Farmer's Almanac reminded us, "This month is short, then work brisk to get done your stint. Waste nothing in house or barn. 'A diligent hand maketh rich.' Remember that moments make days and days make years . ." Mardi Gras, French for "fat Tuesday," is celebrated this week to mark the increasing light of February and March, so we know those days that make years are getting longer, anyway. February 24 is also Shrove Tuesday, a day to confess and obtain absolution for the coming year Also called Fastnacht, it's the "eve of fast" in Germany, the last day before Lent begins on Ash Wednesday.



To-morrow and to-morrow cheat our youth . . .

– Anne Finch

TIP OF THE WEEK

QUICK BEET RISOTTO

3 cups chicken broth
3 medium beets, cooked, then peeled and diced
2 tablespoons butter
1 medium onion, chopped
1-1/2 cups arborio rice
1/2 cup red wine or water
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
salt and pepper, to taste

Bring broth to a boil, add beets, and set aside. Melt butter in a large skillet and sauté the onion until soft Add rice and cook another 5 minutes. Add wine or water, and vinegar, and stir until absorbed Slowly add broth and beets to rice mixture, stirring until liquid is absorbed and rice is tender, about another 20 minutes. Season with salt and pepper This is great with roasted meats

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If there is enough blue sky to make a baby's coat, the weather will clear.

Three fogs in a row, then a rain.

OPINION

FFA A Vital Part Of Agriculture

This is FFA week (February 21-28). FFA enables students to achieve success through educational endeavors, community service and goal setting. One of the major positive aspects of an FFA education is the hands-on experience given students. FFA members, working through local agricultural education programs, are building career skills, developing leadership initiative, and gaining confidence to succeed in the future.

"Students realize the importance agricultural education programs can play in building the skills they need to succeed in the future," says Dr. Larry D. Case, national FFA advisor and coordinator of agricultural and rural education, U.S. Department of Education. "Our members are from very diverse backgrounds, yet they all realize FFA provides a strong foundation of knowledge and skills essential for success in life."

This year the national theme is "Building the Future." Right now, there is a move in Pennsylvania to begin planning the future of ag education. Certainly with the changing agricultural scene, ag education must move ahead with the times. We believe as FFA builds on the past and moves into the future with good intention to make ag education relevant in the next century, the FFA program will always be a necessary part of young people's education.

This FFA week again gives us an opportunity to congratulate all the FFA students and teachers who make the FFA program such a vital part of agriculture and agribusiness.

Now Is The Time

To Manage Alfalfa Stands

Persistence is important to alfalfa growers. The longer a field is productive, the less it costs to grow alfalfa, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. Many things affect the longevity of a stand including variety, weather conditions, soil fertility, harvest management and pests. Some variables affecting the alfalfa plant, the farmer cannot control.

However, to help stands last as long as possible, farmers must control those variables which affect the stand within in their control. These include controlling weed and insect pests ,selecting the right varieties, maintaining proper fertility and cutting at the correct harvest intervals. The Penn State Agronomy Guide gives recommendations on how to manage these variables. The Agronomy Guide is available at your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

To Look At Feeds

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Dairy Agent, reminds us that dairy farmers are in the feed conversion business. Their goal is to add value to home grown and purchased feed by feeding it to cattle and converting it to milk. To accomplish this successfully, they need to have the right kind and quality of feeds and feeds that are digestible and affordable. Farmers need genetically superior cattle that are healthy and capable of digesting large quantities of feed and absorbing nutrients efficiently.

These are the pieces to the puzzle of efficient milk production. Some tests that help farmers monitor how well rations are balanced and feed nutrients are being utilized are milk urea nitrogen (MUN), milk fat and milk protein tests

To Attend Winter Meetings

A lot of new technology is being introduced to agriculture. These include precision agriculture, genetic engineering, bioengineering, computerization of equipment and new processing techniques. These technologies have introduced the development of Bt and brown midrib corn hybrids and new integrated pest management strategies. Kernel and stalk processing techniques like rolling affect digestibility and the manor in which rations have to be reformulated to utilize these feeds and technology efficiently.

This makes the winter meeting season very important. Come and learn about these new technologies and begin thinking which ones you need to adapt to your farming operations. On top of these technologies, farmers also need to learn about the changing economic and business environment they are working in. Do not forget you have 6 weeks to obtain your pesticide credits if your license expires on March 31, 1998.

PERVERTING GOD'S GRACE

February 22, 1998

Background Scripture:
Jude 3-4, 17-25
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 55:6-13

A few months ago, my wife, Valere, and I led a tour to Turkey, following in the footsteps of the Apostles Paul and John. In preparation, I did some research on the history of the Byzantine Empire and its capital. Constantinople, today's Istanbul. For more than 1,000 years Constantinople was the capital not only of the empire, but also Eastern Orthodox Christianity. It was here that Christianity first became a legal religion. One of the greatest Christian churches, Hagia Sophia, also known as St. Sophia, was built as the mother church for Orthodox Christianity.

I was shocked to find that when Constantinople first fell to a foreign army in 1202, it was not to the Islamics, as I had assumed, but an army of Christian Crusaders. The Fourth Crusade was organized with the goal of recapturing the Holy Land and invading Egypt, but once launched, the Crusaders from Western Europe decided that Christian Constantinople was a far more lucrative prize — which, unfortunately, is what the crusades were mostly about.

Worst of all, I discovered that their sack of Constantinople is virtually without parallel. The Crusaders stormed into St. Sophia, looting, pillaging and seriously damaging it. Seizing the sacred vessels, they pried the valuable stones from them and used the vessels in their drunken orgy. They even forced a prostitute to dance lewdly before the altar. They so weakened the city that two centuries later it was unable to withstand the forces of the Islamic Ottoman Empire. History records that the Ottomans were much less rapacious than the Christian armies of Crusaders.

BELYING OUR FAITH

So, what does all of that have to do with the Epistle of Jude and the perversion of God's grace? Answer: it is simply a historic illustration that professing Christians have often grossly perverted the grace of God, giving themselves over to a licentiousness which belied their Christian profession. It can lead us to examine ourselves and our society to determine how the grace of God might still be perverted by people who claim to follow Christ.

Jude, the writer of this oft-forgotten New Testament letter, penned to warn Christians against "false teachers" whose blatant immorality was leading many astray and corrupting some churches. In their midst, he is saying there are "ungodly persons who pervert the grace of our God into licentiousness and deny our only Master and Lord, Jesus Christ (v. 4b).

What did he mean by "pervert the grace of our God?" We do not know exactly who there "ungodly persons" were. We do know that during this period there were some who believed that Jesus was not really human, but just appeared to be. If Jesus was not really human, it was assumed that he had little to do with the earthly lives that we lead. Therefore, you could believe in Christ but still live as if he has little or no significance for the way that we live on earth. So these people could claim Christ for their spirits without involving him in their minds and bodies.

DEPRAVED LIVES

They thus claimed allegiance to Christ, but lived depraved lives in sexual, drunken and violent debauchery — a virtual rejection of the Good News of Jesus Christ. We do not know if the "ungodly persons" consciously and vocally denied Christ, but, even if not, the lives they led denied the true meaning of our Lord.

I suspect that the "ungodly persons" did not recognize themselves in Jude's letter. They probably considered themselves "good Christians," strong supporters of the church and perfectly in step with the morals of the times — just as the Crusaders would centuries later. Despite the depredations they committed, they were greatly admired by Western society and honored by the churches. These people whose lives denied what they professed concerning Christ were more harmful to the gospel than those who openly and publicly denied Christ.

The late theologian Emil Brunner, has written: The scandal of Christianity exists as a scandal only so long as we are full of ourselves. To believe in the cross of Christ is no scandal for those who have seen how perverted is their own wisdom . . . It is the very corrective for this perversion of our sight, it makes us look straight again, who by sin have become cross-eyed. Nothing is moe insidious, nothing perverts more the grace of God than when talking Christianity becomes a substitute for living it.

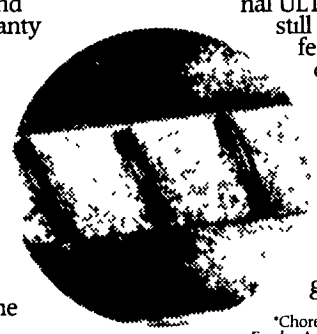
How Do You Improve On The Best?

In the case of Chore-Time's ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder, you do it by beefing up the auger wire and extending the product warranty

Chore-Time's new and improved ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder uses our exclusive round-wire auger It is nearly 10% heavier than our original ULTRAFLO® And that means strength and years more running time for you! We're so confident of it that we've warranted the auger for twice* as long as the old model



What's more, you still get all the features you valued in the original ULTRAFLO® Feeder You can still count on unparalleled feed savings, economical operation, and ULTRAFLO's remixing action which eliminates feed separation

Chore-Time's ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder—contact us today for more information on how the best just got better!

*Chore-Time's New ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder Auger has a 10-year prorated warranty

Devastated By Fire

A tragic house fire has devastated the Douglas Stauffer farm family in the Loveville area of Maryland. All the members of this Mennonite family were burned and the oldest boy later died from his injuries. Friends of the family have set up a relief fund for the family at the First National Bank of St. Mary's at Box 655, Leonardtown, MD. 20650. You may make donations directly to the fund. If you would like more information you may call (301) 884-3487 to reach the friend who set up the fund at the bank.

Phoenix Hereford Earns Dam Of Distinction

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co.
Correspondent

MCVEYTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — Frank Phoenix of Twin Ponds Farm near McVeytown, Mifflin County, owns a Hereford cow by which all other Hereford cows can be compared. FSL Victoria 15G 66A is an unlikely name for a cow with such honors. But because of Victoria's exceptional performance and Frank's well-kept records, she's earned the right to be named the best name of all - Dam of Distinction.

The American Hereford Association (AHA) recently elevated Frank's cow to the level of Dam of Distinction, a position reserved for only 3,646 cows from 941 performance herds in 45 states.

According to AHA standards, an ideal Hereford Cow will calve as a 2-year-old, will produce a healthy, growthy calf every year, and will be problem-free for its owner. Specifically, a Dam of Distinction will calve at 30 months of age or sooner, will have produced at least three calves, and will have had an interval of no greater than 400 days between the first and second calves and no greater than 370 days after her second calf. Cows must have a progeny average 205-day adjusted weaning weight ration of at least 105, and weaning records must be submitted to the Hereford Performance Program.

Looking out across the Twin Ponds pasture, all of the fuzzy, winter-coated, white-faced Herefords look the same. But Frank sees a difference. He believes the Dam of Distinction status will translate into a higher demand and price for his breeding stock. He's spent the past few years building his herd of 20-some animals. Now the marketing begins!

"I've already sold bulls to different breeders in Maryland," Frank said. "I believe in buying good stock. I bought one of the best cows at the Beef Expo several years ago at the Ag Arena at Penn State. And I've been artificially inseminating with semen from a former national champion bull."

Two of Frank's bulls have come under close scrutiny during the Bull Testing Program at the Pennsylvania Meat Animal Evaluation Center near Penn State. Eligible bulls arrive at the evaluation center in mid October for 112 days of testing. They're carefully monitored for weight gain, fat thickness, muscle, feed efficiency, breeding soundness, and more. All winter test bulls must have been born between Jan. 1 and April 15. Most of these bulls are sold at the sale the end of March.

For better breeding performance, Frank enlists A-1 help from neighbor Gordon McKee. Frank tries to plan for January or February calving.

"It helps. The calves are a lot bigger in the fall. And a January or February calf will do better in the Bull Testing Program. Better fat, yearly weight gain, and average weight gain determines the sale order. When I call Gordon, he pretty much comes over right away to breed a cow. I have very few repeats."

Frank purchased his Dam of Distinction at a sale in Gettysburg from the owners of Flat Stone Lick Farm located near Marianna. He has three daughters from her in his herd.

Frank and his wife Kathy own several businesses and rental properties in Lewistown. They met when Frank began working on Kathy's home dairy farm in Clinton County. Their 25-year-old son Spencer was graduated from Penn State and is employed by a State College bank. Frank and Kathy are also putting the final touches on their Garden Treasures shop, located on their farm. Grand opening is scheduled for May.

This farm sign announces the home where Frank and Kathy Phoenix live. This spring, it will also announce the opening of their Garden Treasures shop.

This daughter of Frank Phoenix's Dam of Distinction is only slightly curious about visitors at Twin Ponds Farm near McVeytown, Mifflin County.

In addition to raising Herefords, Frank and Kathy Phoenix will open their garden and gift shop this May. It's located on their Twin Ponds Farm near McVeytown, Mifflin County.

Jersey Production Hits Record High

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The average milk production for Jerseys has climbed to 16,374 pounds nationally, setting another record year for the breed.

With the increased emphasis on protein, Jersey producers area also excelling in keeping up in the market place by increasing protein production by 11 pounds, or 1.9 percent over the 1996 totals.

During 1997, 592 Jersey herds were enrolled in Dairy Herd Improvement Registry and averaged 16,374 pounds milk, 750 pounds fat, and 602 pounds protein.

These mature equivalent (m.e.) averages are based on a total of 52,819 records. This production shows an increase of 2 percent for milk, 1.9 percent for protein and 1.8 percent for fat over the 1996 breed average.

The average actual production for these animals was 14,443 pounds milk, 671 pounds fat and 539 pounds protein. This is an increase of 274 pounds milk, 11 pounds fat, and 10 pounds protein actual, over the 1996 figures.

In addition to a record high average for the Jersey breed, the 1997 DHIR m.e. averages brought good news for individual herds.

Charles Price, owner of Priceland Jerseys, Menomonie, Wis., topped the protein list, with 877 pounds protein on 38 records. Price's herd ranked second for milk and fat with 23,429 pounds milk and 1,087 pounds fat.

Holding the number one position for milk and fat is Sunny Day Farm, Chester, S.C., owned by Herbert, Betty, and Herby D. Lutz. Their 67 Jerseys averaged 24,075 pounds milk, 1,100 pounds fat, and 830 pounds protein.

Twin Ponds Farm is home to a Dam of Distinction Hereford and her offspring. After several years of building a herd, Frank Phoenix will start marketing his Herefords this spring.

Dairy Stakeholders Video Now Available

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) With dairying the largest segment of Pennsylvania's agricultural economy, its impact on local communities is significant.

To demonstrate the important contribution the dairy industry is making, the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders has produced a nine-minute video, "Milk: It Does An Economy Good!"

Targeted for non-agricultural audiences, the video may be useful in starting a productive dialog with community leaders about the importance of the dairy industry, according to Philip Kimmel, president of the Stakeholders.

"The video brings an important message to business leaders, county commissioners, legislators, township supervisors, economic development councils, and other decision makers," Kimmel said.

It is available now for persons and organizations interested in delivering this important economic message.

Many rural communities rely heavily on their local dairy producers for economic stability. With rapid changes taking place in the dairy industry, including the loss of some dairy farms, it is important for dairying's economic importance to be understood.

A recent study by The Pennsylvania State University's College of Agricultural Sciences demonstrates that a two-percent change in dairy output represents 570 jobs internally and externally to the industry.

Kimmel said, "Given the proper business climate, the dairy industry in Pennsylvania can reverse its current declining trend and grow. A growing dairy industry results in more jobs for all Pennsylvanians and the preservation of agriculture's contribution to our rural communities and to all of Pennsylvania."

Dairying represents 40 percent of the state's farm income, and Pennsylvania is a national leader in dairy food processing and distribution.

Production and distribution of the video was made possible by contributions from the dairy industry and with the support of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Copies of the video are available through the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, who represent all segments of the dairy industry, from producers to consumers.

Pennsylvania DHIA Reports Good Year Presents Awards At Banquet

not occure without hard work and dedication by many people," Hershey said. "Fiscal year 1997 brought a bottom line profit of well over $182,000 which serves to greatly strengthen the equity position of your organization. We continue to strive to find ways to have your organization serve you in a more cost efficient manner."

At the awards banquet held in the Nittany Lion Inn, Edward Brake, Mercersburg, received the prestigious Clyde S. Robinson leadership award. Edward in partnership with his son Glenn own and operate Oakleigh Farms. The family farm is well known in national dairy circles.

Edward began at an early age to recognize the benefits of using latest technology. In the early days this included registering cattle, artifical breeding and new milking procdures. They were one of the first farms in Franklin County to install a milking parlor.

Today, DHIA plays an important role in the management of the herd. And DHIA has also benefited from Edwards unselfish involvement. He has served on the local board for 15 years, 7 years as president and 7 years as vice president. He has supported 4-H club work, and has served in the dairy promotion program.

Family oriented, Edward is a leader in the community and dairy affairs. He is outstanding dairy farmer, a cooperative and congenial individual, the kind of person that makes our country great.

The herd management awards were presented. The complete list accompanies this report.

Speakers on the program included, Linda Baker, VMD, who reported on her research into understanding true protein in relation with the milk urea nitrogen values, and Jim Boyer, manager, PA DRPC, who spoke on making the internet work for you.

New York Farm Bureau Seeks Dairy Compact Legislation

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New Jersey Gov. Christie Whitman signed legislation recently allowing New Jersey to join the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact.

Similarly, New York's Senate Agriculture Committee passed the "Dairy Compact Bill."

New York Farm Bureau hopes that the New York Legislature will follow New Jersey's lead and adopt the legislation.

"It is amazing how a state like New Jersey, which is home to only 230 dairy farms, can overwhelmingly pass legislation that will financially help their dairy farmers in an economic crisis," said John Lincoln, New York Farm Bureau president.

"Here, in New York, where the dairy industry holds more prominence in the state's economy, legislators have yet to decide which direction to take with the Compact. I commend New Jersey for passing the Dairy Compact Bill and hope New York will do the same."

Unlike New Jersey's dairy industry which generates $44.8 million and only accounts for 6 percent of the state's farm receipts, New York's industry is much larger.

New York's dairy industry is the largest sector of the state's largest industry. State dairy farmers contribute more than $1.32 billion to the state's farm receipts — that is 50 percent of the total revenue.

Losing such an industry would financially upset the state and would economically devastate rural, upstate New York.

There are more than 8,900 dairy farmers remaining in New York, most of whom are struggling to overcome an intense cost/price squeeze that the current milk pricing system has forced upon them. These farmers need an immediate solution and joining the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact is an answer to this problem which can be implemented easily.

As stated in the Compact, "Each new state must be contiguous to a participating state."

With the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact implemented in the six New England States, the Compact leaves New York as the "gatekeeper" for states to the south, such as New Jersey and Pennsylvania, to join.

"It is unfortunate that New Jersey's entry in to the Compact rests on New York's decision, but New York can help those farmers and the farmers of this state by passing the legislation," said Lincoln.

New York Farm Bureau is the statewide lobbying/trade organization that represents more than 28,400-member farm families. The organization is known to its members and the public as "the voice of agriculture." Farm Bureau is dedicated to solving economic and public policy issues challenging the agricultural industry.

New ID System

Submitted by Nick Place
Susquehanna County Cooperative Extension Director

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — Beginning Jan. 1, a new system of identifying dairy cows went into effect.

The new identification numbers, called "American ID Numbers," are to be accepted by any United States database as an animal's primary identification and are compatible with international systems, according to Chuck Sattler, genetic programs administrator, National Association of Animal Breeders.

Animals currently enrolled in DHIA or breed programs will not need to be renumbered, Sattler said, but calves and animals receiving their first identification number will be issued an American ID Number once the transition is complete.

Dairy producers who do not currently ID their animals through DHIA or one of the breed organizations will not be required to do so under the new system.

"But I'm convinced we'll face more and more pressure on the food safety side" of the industry, said Sattler.

The thrust behind the change was to unify the handful of numbering systems in the U.S. dairy industry. Reprinted with permission Dairy Profit Weekly, December 22, 1997.

Alfalfa Pests Under Gun At Lancaster Crops Day

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Last year, Pennsylvania alfalfa growers witnessed the heaviest potato leafhopper pressure in the past 10-15 years, according to Dr. Dennis Calvin, Penn State entomologist.

Calvin spoke to about 65 producers and agri-industry representatives last week at the Lancaster County Crops and Soils Day at the Farm and Home Center.

For the most part, the potato leafhopper was the insect in alfalfa. But even with improved resistant plant breeds, the pest is becoming more difficult to control in alfalfa fields, Calvin noted.

The leafhopper migrates up from the Gulf of Mexico and eastern Atlantic seaboard. It doesn't overwinter in Pennsylvania, but can overwinter as far north as southern Maryland. It's a big problem on second or third cuttings and on established stands.

The tiny insect does mechanical damage to the phloem cells of the plant. The phloem cells provide minerals and food to the plant. As the leafhopper saps this, a yellow color forms on the leaves. This leads to reductions in dry matter and especially the alfalfa plant's overall crude protein levels. Yield losses can exceed 1,500 pounds per acre in established stands.

The leafhopper's feeding results in a stunted appearance to the alfalfa plant and V-shaped yellow areas on the tips of leaves.

There is some hope for the alfalfa grower, however. There are several varieties that can fight the leafhopper:

• A glandular hair (GH) variety offers true resistance. The hairs on the plants prevent feeding and also release a chemical exudate that can kill the bugs.

• Non-yellowing varieties. This is not a true form of resistance, Calvin noted. These varieties still can see damage, it's just that they don't yellow.

Calvin related the results of Penn State studies in 1996 that looked at the relative yields of the two different varieties. The non-yellowing varieties yielded about 1.71 tons of alfalfa per acre. But the GH varieties showed promise, at 1.99 tons per acre.

Sweeps of the plants provided further evidence that GH varieties can be the way to go. In tests of sweeps in 1997, the GH variety registered only 1.5 leafhoppers per sweep, compared to 15-16 for other varieties.

"There is some economic advantage to using the material," Calvin noted, showing that the resultant improved tons per acre harvest can benefit growers.

But overall yield as a result of using the new varieties depends a lot on the insect pressure at the site, weather conditions, and other matters, if growers want to calculate the economic advantages of using the new varieties. The material looks good, Calvin noted, in years with heavy leafhopper pressure. But there is no yield improvement in years when leafhopper pressure is low. But those who use the GH varieties can benefit from additional chemical treatment for leafhopper when the insect pressure is higher.

Questions remain, however: do GH varieties extend the life of a stand? What percent of the fields have high leafhopper pressure? How do the GH varieties compare with traditional varieties? And how will they perform after the establishment year? He suggested that growers start small, experiment a little bit with variety selection, to determine what they think about it.

Calvin also reviewed other pests on fields, including the alfalfa weevil and other pests.

Dr. O. Elwood Hatley, Penn State agronomist, reviewed the use of alterative forage crops at the Crops Day. They include spring oats, spring barley, winter rye, triticale, wheat, and others. They work as a good source of continues year-round feed, as a hedge against drought, as a better, more efficient use of cover crops for feed (particularly rye), provide to growers a "window" for manure applications, and as nitrate retention sources.

For seeding, growers need to follow a planned program.

Depending on how the material will be harvested — seeding rate for silage should be 25 percent above the grain rate and growers should increase the application an additional 10 percent when broadcasting. Fertility programs should be in place.

Dr. Greg Roth, Penn State corn specialist, provided a summary of the growing year and making use of yield monitors in the field.

O. Elwood Hatley spoke about the use of soybeans in the field as a forage crop. The soybeans are grown for their vegetative aspects, not grain.

He examined a Beltsville, Md. breeding program looking at three different varieties of silage soybeans: Donegal (for the Mid-Atlantic region), Tyrone, and Derry. They are named after towns near Beltsville.

Using soybeans for silage depends what the grower's objective is and what previous crop was grown at the site. Using the right

THE CORN HERBICIDE NAMED FOR HOW IT WORKS.

FulTime™ HERBICIDE

Farmers who use it say FulTime™ herbicide is the most effective premix for grass and broadleaf weed control. Even in heavy residue no-till and reduced-till fields. It only requires 1/4" of moisture for activation. And FulTime can be applied weeks before planting. The encapsulated acetochlor gives full-season, timed-release control of grasses as well as small-seeded broadleaf weeds, including resistant lambsquarters, waterhemp and pigweed. The atrazine provides burndown and added performance on large-seeded broadleaf weeds. Ask your full-service crop protection dealer/applicator for FulTime. Or call our Information Hotline at 1-800-759-2500.

Extension Sheep Series

YORK (York Co.) — Area sheep producers are invited to attend a Sheep Management Series planned for March 5, 12, 19 and 26 at the York County 4-H Center at Bair. On consecutive Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m., sheep producers will study four areas of importance: care and maintenance of shearing equipment, lamb carcass evaluation, ram and ewe selection and evaluating the effectiveness of the parasite control program.

Penn State Extension Specialist Dr. Clair Engle will be the featured speaker for each of the meetings. Participants are encouraged to register with the York County Extension Office by February 27. The York Office phone number is (717) 840-7408. Enrollment fee for the series is $15/farm operation to cover the cost of materials. The York County 4-H Center is located at 771 Stoverstown Road, off Route 116 West near the town of Bair.

For more information, contact Tim Beck at the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office at (717) 840-7408. Penn State is an affirmative action, equal opportunity university. If you anticipate needing any type of accommodation or have questions about the physical access provided, please contact Tim Beck (telephone 717-840-7408) in advance of your participation.

During the first session, participants are encouraged to bring hand held electric shears. Dr. Engle will teach how to disassemble and repair shearing equipment. Participants will take apart their equipment and perform needed repairs. Most shears will need parts that will cost from $1.50-$2. Each participant will be billed for parts needed for their equipment. Dress warmly since this session will be held in the unheated Exhibition Building at the 4-H Center.

For the second session, Drs. Engle will talk about lamb carcass evaluation. He will discuss how to correlate visual appraisal with lamb carcass value. Ram and ewe selection will be featured at the third session. Discussion will focus on setting priorities for the sheep breeding program.

The optional fourth session will be held based on the interest of the participants. If there is sufficient interest the session will focus on evaluating the effectiveness of the sheep parasite control program. Participants will learn how to perform a fecal flotation to decide how well the parasite control program is working.

Short Course To Train Dairy Farm Employees

COLUMBUS, Ohio — As dairy farms become larger, dairy owners must hire more people to do more specialized jobs.

If these new employees aren't trained properly, a farm's milk quality and production levels could suffer, said Maurice Eastridge, Ohio State University Extension dairy farm management specialist.

"Someone new to dairy farming may not know how to recognize when cows have mastitis or when and how to treat them," Eastridge said.

"They may not know the importance of sanitizing milk lines to keep milk quality high. Or, they may not realize that treating cows poorly or abruptly changing milking routines could affect production."

To help train recently hired dairy farm employees and people pursuing work on a dairy farm, Ohio State University Extension and the Agricultural Technical Institute will hold its first Dairy Farm Employee Short Course March 24-26 at ATI in Wooster.

"The short course was developed specifically for dairy employees who are in the parlor milking or out in the barn or pastdure feeding cows. It's not necessarily a program for the farm owner," Eastridge said. "It's several days of focused training, not just a one-day, hit-or-miss program."

On Tuesday, March 24, participants will get an introduction to the dairy industry and its importance to world food production. Animal behavior, detecting when a cow is in heat and observing animals for health problems also will be discussed.

Participants can choose to spend Wednesday learning about either milking management or feeding management.

Anatomy and physiology, sanitation, milk quality, milking procedures, mastitis control, abnormal and normal milk, and milking systems will be covered in the milking section.

Feeding management topics will include digestive anatomy and physiology, dry matter intake, Total Mixed Ration (TMR) management, feed types and characteristics, feed storage, nutrition and herd health, and working with a feed salesperson.

Feed is the greatest variable cost of producing milk, Eastridge said. If there is a feeding problem, milk production may respond dramatically and quickly.

For example, higher moisture levels increase feed weight. If the moisture content of forage increases and feed rations are mixed solely by weight and not dry matter content, a cow could receive the same pounds of feed, but not the same amount of fiber and dry matter. A lack of dry matter and fiber can lower milk production and cause digestive problems, Eastridge said.

"The programs will be very hands-on, with training at both ATI's dairy center and the Krauss Dairy Center at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center," Eastridge said. "We'll do some practice milking and feed mixing."

On Thursday, farm safety and getting along with employers and other employees will be discussed.

"We're trying to make the short course more than just feeding and milking training by including other issues that are important to dairy farm employees," Eastridge said.

In addition to many Ohio State instructors, several dairy industry representatives will speak during the short course.

"We like to team up with industry people and draw upon their expertise when conducting these kinds of programs," Eastridge said.

People who complete the three-day short course will receive a certificate verifying their completion of the program. The certificate may be helpful to people seeking employment on a dairy, he said. If the first-time program is successful, it will be offered on an annual basis.

The registration deadline for the Dairy Farm Employee Short Course is Feb. 27.

The $225 fee includes two lunches, refreshment breaks and course materials. Participants will need to make their own lodging reservations.

The course is limited to 50 people — 25 each for Wednesday's milking and feeding management sessions — and is offered on a first-come, first-served basis.

For registration or more information about the short course, interested people can contact Tom Noyes, Extension dairy agent at the Wayne County Extension office, (330) 264-8722; Kim Sayers, program director of ATI Continuing Education, (330) 264-3911, ext. 1326; or their local office of Ohio State University Extension.

Ayrshire Spring Convention, Sale March 27-28

ULSTER (Bradford) — The Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association has announced plans for its spring convention and sale, set to be held March 27 and 28 in Towanda.

According to the association, the convention dinner and princess contest are to be held March 27 at the Williamston Inn in Towanda, while the annual meeting and spring sale are to be held March 28 — the meeting at the Inn, the sale at the Valley Stock Yards, in Athens.

During the convention the PABA will announce its Hall of Fame inductee. That is scheduled to occur at 6:20 p.m., March 27.

Those PABA members who know of someone who has contributed to the Ayrshire breed and who should be considered for the prestigious award should call Don Gable by March 18 at (610) 286-2967, or write him at RD2 Box 76, Elverson, PA 19520.

The selection and crowning of a new state Ayrshire princess is to be done during the convention, and applications can be made until March 18.

The contest is open to any young woman aged 13 years to 20 years old who has an active interest in promoting the Ayrshire breed and the willingness to attend breed functions, show and activities, as well as any other dairy related function at which Ayrshire could be promoted and represented.

Those interested should send two photographs of themselves, a brief biography, and reasons why they would like to serve in the position of Ayrshire princess, to: Sharon Nolan, RD 1, Box 10, Cochranville, PA 19330; or Bonnie Wentworth, 1026 River Rd., Quarryville, PA 17566.

The association is also seeking Ayrshire maids, open to girls aged 8 to 13 years old. Those interested should submit the same materials required for Ayrshire princess consideration to Nolan or Wentworth.

For more information on those programs, call Nolan at (610) 469-3124; or (717) 548-3896.

The princess contest is to be held from 6 p.m. to 6:20 p.m., March 27. The crowning of the new state Ayrshire princess is to be done at 7:30 p.m..

Ayrshire youth production awards are also awarded during the two-day convention.

The presentation of awards is to be made starting 7:40 p.m. March 27.

Any Pennyslvania, New Jersey or West Virginia junior Ayrshire member who has owned any registered Ayrshire cow before the current calendar year, that is tested by the Dairy Herd Improvement Association or has DHIR tests, and the name of the junior member along or in partnership is on the registration, is eligible to submit the records for the production contest.

Production records made on three-times-per-day milking are to be considered the same with twice-per-day milking.

Award classifications are for senior yearling, 2-year-old, 3-year-old, 4-year-old, and 5-year-old and older cows, for total production and lifetime production.

Certificates are to be presented to each applicant and plaques are to be awarded to the top winners in each class for milk production, fat production, protein production, total production and lifetime production.

Application deadline is March 2, and shou'd be made to Amy Wolfgang, Ayrshire youth director, and sent to her at 287 Hillcurch Rd., Bechtelsville, PA 19505.

For an application or more information, call Wolfgang at (610) 367-1050.

An "Anything Goes Auction" is also to be held during the convention to raise money for the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Youth Fund for 4-H and FFA youth across the state. It also helps sponsor the state Ayrshire dairy bowl team.

As the name implies, anything can end up being auctioned in support of the youth programs.

The Pennsylvania Ayrshire dairy bowl team has done "a fantastic job representing Pennsylvania in past national conventions and will be going again this year to Iowa," according to an association news release.

The auction is set to be held 8 p.m. March 27.

On March 28, from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m., a breakfast buffet is scheduled to start the day, followed by the association's annual meeting.

The sale is sechduled to start at 11:30 a.m. at the Valley Stock Yards with Bo Elliott set to serve as auctioneer, and Kristen Russell to read pedigrees.

Any potential consignments for the sale should be directed to Ben Hillyard, sale manager, (717) 596-4371. This year, the sale is accepting all ages of calves, heifers and cows.

New Type Evaluations For Jerseys

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Beginning in February, a new multi-trait animal model will be used to calculate genttic evaluations for type.

The AJCA is among the first U.S. dairy breeds to use the multi-trait animal model. The multi-trait model takes advantage of advanced technology which results in more accurate information for breed improvement.

Because the correlation (0.8) between the new mult-trait animal model and the old sire model are not equal, there will be some re-ranking of bulls and cows.

Reasons why the re-ranking may occur:

1. The new multi-trait model considers the entire pedigree of the animal. Under the sire model system, the only contribution from the dam's side was through the maternal grandsire;

2. Thke multi-trait model requires a first lactation appraisal. Appraisals after the second lactation are not used;

3. Both males and females will be evaluated simultaneously. In the sire model, males were calculated first then those numbers were used to evaluate females.

4. The new multi-trait model utilizes new heritability estimates, genetic correlations, and age adjustment factors.

But he changed his mind once he began studying what compacts could do the dairy producers and has since become one of the region's most vocal advocates for their passage.

"Dairy Farmers of America, at its meeting last week in Kansas City, unanimously passed support for the concept of dairy compacts," notes Gardner. " We are working cooperatively with Land O'Lakes, Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers, Dairylea and the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau toward getting legislation passed to support Pennsylvania's dairy producers joining a compact. And DFA's Northeast Council is working to support all the compact proposals within our council area

"Legislators need to hear from their dairy farmer constituents or they will think we don't believe compacts are important," Gardner said, urging producers to get in touch with their state senators and representatives on the issue.

"The establishment of a dairy compact is Pennsylvania would in no way interfere with the operations of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board," he said "It would, in fact, complement PMMB's pricing program, as well as work well with the existing federal orders. And it would allow Pennsylvania to work closely with other northeastern states in setting a fair price for Class I milk "

Garner further noted that farm prices for milk have declined some 5 percent in real dollars since 1985, before additional adjustments for inflation are figured. The goal of a compact to help stabilize prize and thus the dairy industry itself, as increasing numbers of Northeast farmers exit the dairy business due to cash flow squeeze.

Beverly Minor, Washington County dairy producer and chairman of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, indicates that the PMMB, too, has been doing its homework on compact concepts and issues.

"We have been very involved in ongoing discussions about compacts, especially with what has been happening in New Jersey and New York; in fact, we probably initiated some of those discussions," she said.

Compacts provide for regional milk pricing systems, reflecting local milk market conditions, and work with existing federal milk marketing orders to price the farm value of Class I fluid, or drinking, milk only. They have no pricing impact on milk used for manufacturing any other dairy product, such as ice cream, butter of cheese

Dairy compacts first won Congressional approval in the 1996 Farm Bill and generated formation of the Northeast Dairy Compact, which became operational in July, 1997. States can only join if they are contiguous to those already in a compact; each state's legislation must be compatible with the law of others in the compact Compacts set a uniform Class I price to dairy companies which process and package fluid milk within the boundaries of the compact.

Such companies with fluid milk sales outside the compact area receive credits on the volume not marked within its boundaries, so they can remain competitive on those outside sales.

Processors located outside the compact boundaries are affected by the pricing regulation on only the volume of Class I they sell into the compact area.

Gardner also serves as vice-chairman of the New York Producers' Bargaining Agency, which has been instrumental in helping to move a dairy compact bill working its way through New York's legislative body.

Compact legislation was recently signed by New Jersey's governor. A compact bill was in the making in the West Virginia's legislature last week, while Maryland and Kentucky producers continue to pursue compact legislation within their states

According to Gardner, the New York Dairy Compact task force has gone on record to support that state's joining of the Northeast Compact, if legislation in the Empire State clears all hurdles.

The Northeast Dairy Compact covers the six New England states and has generated an additional $30 million in income to the compact area's dairy producers since its inception in July.

The Compact's pricing mechanism has been upheld thus far through three increasingly-higher court challenges by opponents.

"A compact can help stabilize milk prices to benefit consumers as well as farmers, " said Gardner, a Potter County producer who milks 90 cows on the family's dairy and crops operation.

It helps to adjust sudden, wide fluctuations in milk price, such as we have experienced under the federal pricing structure. That helps maintain farm stability and discourages sudden increases in milk price at the retail level."

Dairy producers, like Gardner, have grown increasingly frustrated that increases in on-farm milk prices are quickly translated to the retail market, while decreasing in farm milk prices are not correspondingly passed on to consumer.

"It is critical that dairy producers be in touch with their legislative representatives," Garner said. "If legislators do not hear from their farmer constituents, they will think we don't care that a compact doesn't matter.:

Dairy producers interested in more information on the Dairy Compact proposals are encouraged to contact Lewis Gardner at (814) 435-2109, Dennis Schadd, Land O'Lakes dairy cooperative at (215)322-0200, Robert Shore, Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers, at (703) 742-6800, Ed Gallagher, Dairylea, (315) 433-0100, or Joel Rotz, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, at (717) 761-2740.

The Dairy Compact: A Broad Look At What People Are Saying

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — There has been much activity in the nation's dairy industry recently.

Within the past two weeks, the nation's largest dairy cooperative — Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) — announced a pact with New Zealand to make cheese together in a Midwestern facility, while at the same time lobbying hard in several state governments to open up the Northeast Dairy Compact.

In the meantime, the industry awaits a final ruling on an appeal of the November decision by federal Judge Doty that struck down the Class I differentials set by the

Belleville Hoof Trimming Clinic Draws A Large Crowd

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — In the push for higher and higher milk production per cow, dairy producers often walk a fine line between maximizing profits and risking animal health. Unfortunately, farmers often share that path with a lame cow. When hoof trimmer Paul Neer from Belleville, Mifflin County, began noticing more and more cows with sore feet, he organized a prevention and awareness clinic.

He enlisted the help of Michael Lormore, a veterinarian with Monsanto, and Christopher Canale, director of Technical Services with Agway, to talk about foot health through rumen health. It's a sore subject farmers are growing more concerned about — over 250 people showed up.

"I've been a hoof trimmer for over eight years," began Neer. "In the last year and a half, foot trouble has virtually exploded. We hoof trimmers, veterinarians, milk haulers all depend on the dairymen. When I see this kind of trouble, it's time to talk about prevention and awareness."

Research shows that laminitis is one of the most significant sources of lameness in dairy cattle. Laminitis is an inflammation in "one of the narrow thin parallel plates of soft vascular sensitive tissues that cover the flesh within the wall of the hoof." Nutrition is recognized as a major cause.

"It's all about rumen function," says Lormore. "Good feedbunk health. Laminitis is metabolic and is far more expensive than an infection. Regular foot trimming is an important part in managing a herd. Laminitis will be a big problem in the next 10 years, as we push toward 35,000-pound herd averages and get feed into the cows for energy. Laminitis will be a major problem."

Canale agrees. "Through management technology and strategy — nutrition, forages, health and cow comfort — we can control rumen health. Taking care of the rumen can help feet. It's a disease of management."

In laymen's terms, the problem can begin with when a cow is fed excessive fermentable carbohydrates, finely chopped forage, and slug grain. Some metabolic and digestive disorders, hormonal changes, and infectious diseases can add to the problem, as well as environmental aspects such as lack of or little bedding, hard stall surfaces, lack of exercise, or too much exercise on improper surfaces.

Paul Neer leads discussion about the need for hoof trimming to keep dairy animals in good physical condition.

According to Dr. J.E. Nocek of the Spruce Haven Research Center in Union Springs, New York, carbohydrates make up approximately 70 to 80 percent of the dairy cow's ration. The level and availability in a cow's ration can have significant impact on rumen metabolism. Increases in the amount of concentrate or fermentable carbohydrates decreases saliva production, an important factor in neutralizing acids produced by ruminal fermentation.

A related study came to this conclusion: "Cows fed high concentrates had more lameness, of greater severity and duration, with sole lesions being the major problem. However, cows fed more grain produced 3.2 kg more milk/day with .06 percentage units higher milk protein."

High levels of rumen degradable protein has been shown to increase lameness and laminitis in several studies conducted in the late '80s and early '90s.

As for forages, particle length is required to ensure proper rumen function. In an evaluation conducted at Penn State, Jud Heinrichs concluded that "Reduced forage particle size has been shown to decrease the time spent chewing and cause a trend toward decreased rumen pH. When cows spend less time chewing, there is a decrease in the volume of saliva produced needed to buffer the rume."

Nocek concludes, "Nutrition and laminitis are linked tdhrough imbalances in carbohydrate nutrition: overload of ruminally fermentable carbohydrate in conjunction with inadequate effective fiber. The sub-clinical phase of both disease processes is most costly and damaging because they are often dismissed for other problems, allowing the disease to progress to an irreversible chronic phase. Since the highest incidence of laminitis is detected during the first 30 to 40 days post-partum, it is also associated with the occurrence of infectious and metabolic diseases, as well as environmental stress. It is important to profitably manage acidosis and laminitis since both are a consequence of maximizing energy intake, milk production, and found in well managed herds. Critical areas of management include: feeding and management practices, attention to cow comfort, routine hoof trimming (twice/year), maintenance of adequate body condition, etc."

As news of the hoof-trimming clinic spread, families filled the auction area at Kish Valley Dairy Sales in Belleville, owned by Sherm Glick. Paul Neer introduced retired classifier Paul Miller who spoke about breeding strength back into herds. The group then moved outside for hoof trimming demonstrations on several cows with various foot problems. Neer urged farmers to learn the difference between warts, corns, and foot rot and to look for hemorrhaging.

York County Farmers Appeal Tax Assessment

YORK (York Co.) — Dairy farmer Doug Kilgore got a nasty shock last summer when he opened a notice of reassessment on his southern York County farm.

"Our taxes had more than doubled," he says. "Also, the initial notice did not include all the required information. It had only the total market value, which is actually the reassessed Clean and Green value. That's one of our beefs about the whole issue."

"And the wording on how to appeal was very confusing. The notice was misleading," adds Kilgore, whose children comprise the fourth generation on the family dairy operation. The extended Kilgore family farms upwards of 800 acres on the western bluffs of the Susquehanna River, near Holtwood Dam.

But the Kilgores weren't the only York County landowners to receive such a jolt following the reassessment of property values conducted prior to the sending of new valuation notices for real estate taxing purposes. Thousands of other York County rural landowners, with much of their acreage signed up in the Clean and Green tax reduction program for keeping the land undeveloped, underwent the same sort of property valuation "sticker shock" on opening their reassessment notices.

Kilgore and about a half-dozen other leaders of the county's Farm Bureau decided to protest the reassessment. They met together, then approached the York County commissioners with their concerns. Though their initial meeting with commissioner Robert Minnich, the only one of the three-member board able to attend that gathering, was congenial, it was several weeks before they received a response.

It was not one they were pleased with. The response was that the assessment and valuations would stand.

"No one was going to give on anything. That was hard for us to swallow after offering what we believed was a very rational plea to re-evaluate how this had been done," Kilgore says.

Thus, the Fair Reassessment of York County (FRYC) committee was formed as part of the York County Farm Bureau. The committee has filed a class action appeal to the county's Assessment Board on behalf of property owners with 10 or more acres in the Clean and Green program.

A January 27 letter from the FRYC went out to more than York County 9,000 property owners, explaining its positions and detailing several problems it sees with the reassessment. The group has also hired a law firm with a successful track record on doing battle with a similar reassessment problem in the neighboring Lancaster County, a few years ago. Should its appeal to the Assessment Board not be successful, legal action is a likely option.

According to the FRYC's letter, the following seven issues of the reassessment are the base of the dispute:

"—Clean and Green rates for the Agricultural-Use portion of the assessment are nearly twice as high as they should be. This is true for tillable, pasture and woodland acres.

"—The Clean and Green rates currently used by the county are flat rates applied to all acres throughout the county without regard to soil productivity. The law requires the Clean and Green value on each property be based upon the soil productivity as established by the USDA soil survey.

"—The new homesite acre value is based upon the value of a one-acre building lot. This results in an extremely high first acre value and may not even be permitted under Pennsylvania law.

"—Building values are too high. County officials believe that the replacement cost of buildings is the same as market value. This results in excessive values on buildings.

"—The notice of Change of Assessment is defective. The notice did not notify the property owner of the old or new Fair Market Value as required by law. The total value printed was, in fact, the Clean and Green value, but was labeled Fair Market Value.

"—If you file an appeal with the Board of Assessment appeals in York County, it is impossible to receive an impartial, non-biased decision from the Board. The Board of Assessment Appeals has openly documented that it set the new Clean and Green Values and will not, under any circumstances, change items.

"—County officials failed to complete the reassessment according to state-mandated deadlines. It is required by law that all appeal hearings be heard by October 13, otherwise the reassessment can be ruled invalid. The reason for this is so the new tax base can be certified by November 15, and municipalities can set their tax millages accurately and on time. It appears that as of this time, there are thousands of hearings not yet heard."

As part of their appeal to York County's rural taxpayers, the FRYC included a questionnaire which property owners are asked to complete and return for the committee's use in compiling information and illustrations of inequitable reassessments. The committee is further enlisting financial assistance from affected property owners to pursue a class action lawsuit. Suggested contribution is $40, plus 50-cents per acre owned. The fund is being administered by York County Farm Bureau's bonded treasurer, Ailean Detter, Dover.

According to Al Raniero, acting director of York County's Assessment Board, the last prior assessment in the county was done in the late 1980s and based on 100 percent of 1987 market values. Base for the new assessment valuations, which took effect January 1 and were sent to owners July 1997, are 100 percent of 1996 market values. County tax millage, previously at 3.6 mills, has been reduced to 2.52 mills as of January.

Farmers are not the only property owners unhappy and filling an appeal, according to Raniero. A condominium complex has taken similar action. Overall, Raniero, says the percentage of appeals over the assessment valuations was quite low.

But, it was farmers who saw the largest increase in their assessments. Average increase across the entire county was 43 percent. Farm values, however, increased an average of 76 percent, or nearly twice the county average. Some landowners have seen their assessed valuations increase by 300 percent.

While a consultiong firm was hired for the property appraising process, it was county Assessment Board staffers who did the actual legwork out in the field, says Raniero. Each farm was visited, some twice. Photos were taken and volumes of data gathered. Values for various land uses were based on an average of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's valuation of various soils classification. Tillage acres were valued at $625 per acre, pasture at $550, woodland at $415 and wastelands/wetlands at $200.

One of the farmers' protests to that methodology of valuation is that soils have a wide range of types and productivity across the county. They are also irked that valuations are also higher than those for similar soil types in surrounding counties.

Homesite valuation is another contended issue. Raniero explains that house sites were previously valued at $9500 per acre. Now, the values are based on the neighborhood values of homesite land, with a 25 percent discounting done across the board on all farm homesite valuations. Still, depending on the area in which the farm is located, some homesite portions may range as high as $30,000 per acre; average is in the low $20,000-plus range. Clean and Green valuation does not apply to the homesite portion of a farm property.

However, there is no homesite valuation on parcels not including a house. Prior assessments, according to Raniero, did include a homesite value.

"Some homes were previously very low in market value," he notes. "But the bulk of the farmers' protest is that the $625 tillable-acre-value is too high."

County commissioner Chris Reilly says the Board of Commissioners is "very sympathetic to the concerns expressed by the farmers."

"Each of the three of us has attempted to intercede with the Assessment Board," Reilly says of the board, which includes fellow commissioners Robert Minnich and Shirley Glass. "Our requests that the board review the assessments as to changes to valuations were declined."

USDA Announces EQIP Funds For Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) State Conservationist Janet Oertly announced Pennsylvania's funding allocation for 1998 under USDA's Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP).

NRCS in Pennsylvania received $4.18 million for technical, educational and financial assistance for projects under EQIP.

"This program will help producers address some of the most critical natural resource concerns, such as soil erosion, water quality and quantity, wildlife habitat and wetlands," Oertly said. "More productive croplands, cleaner water, and better wildlife will benefit all Pennsylvania residents."

Under EQIP, USDA can provide cost-share assistance to family-sized farms and ranches for up to 75 percent of the cost of certain environmental protection practices, such as grassed waterways, filter strips, manure manageent facilities, capping abandoned wells, and wildlife habitat enhancement.

USDA also may provide incentive payments to encourage producers to apply such land management practices as nutrient, manure, irrigation water, wildlife, and integrated pest management.

This fiscal year, 75 percent of the cost-share funds will be targeted toward local resource issues in 13 watersheds, and 35 percent will be used to address statewide resource concerns involved with crop production and livestock and poultry production.

Local groups, consisting of federal, state and local agencies and interested national resource organizations submitted proposed water sheds from across the state for consideration.

From the proposed watersheds, or geographic priority areas, 27 were selected by Oertly, in conjunction with the State Technical Committee, and USDA's Farm Service Agency.

With the funding split recommended by the State Technical Committee, 13 of the top geographic priority area proposals will be fully funded this fiscal year. These areas have significant soil, water, or related natural resource concerns.

Each geographic priority area will announce its own sign-up periods, Oertly said.

Producers located outside of the priority watersheds can become involved in the program through the two statewide resource concerns. The sign-up period for the statewide resource concerns will be announced in the next few weeks.

A conservation plan is needed for all EQIP contracts, which are five to 10 years in length.

NRCS, county conservation district staffs, and staff of the Extension Service will provide the technical and educational assistance producers need to apply or install conservation practices based on their conservation plan, Oertly said. The plan will describe conservation and management practices to protect soil, water, air or related natural resources.

With an annual national budget of $200 million authorized through 2002, EQIP is USDA's largest conservation program designed to conserve and improve land while it remains in agricultural production.

EQIP was authorized by the 1996 Farm Bill to address agriculture's priority natural resource and environmental problems. It reflects the commitment of USDA and the Congress for a flexible, effective, voluntary conservation program for agricultural land.

York County Farmers

"We have always encouraged citizens to go through the appeals process if they are unhappy with an assessment valuation," adds Commissioner Reilly. "And we have instructed our solicitor to have the hearing take place as quickly as possible within the necessary time frame."

And, on a personal note, Reilly says he is happy that the farmers' group is initially taking the appeals route, as opposed to legal action. With farm-owning relatives, Reilly adds that is well-versed in the concern over the increased cost farmers will face from the increased property assessments.

Grain produced Bill Buser, East Prospect, a former president of the county's Farm Bureau, chairs the FYRC. Buser is no newcomer to property assessment issues, having first gotten involved in them when his family constructed a new hog production barn several years ago.

"We knew we had to take the action that we did," affirms Buser of the appeal of the reassessment valuations. "And we've geen getting lots of calls from people who want to be part of it."

"But," he emphasizes, "if they're not already signed up in Clean and Green, we can't help."

Property owners seeking more information on the FRYC may contact Buser at 717-755-3271 or Kilgore at 717-862-3117.

El Nino Effects May Actually Reverse

"media flood" about the issue and a lot of misinformation, according to the state climatologist.

But weather forecasters balk at putting the El Nino as solely responsible for the strange weather patterns globally.

"To ascribe El Nino as the cause of storms in southern California and as the cause of coastal flooding is about as ludicrous as the statements made at the presidential press conference (recently), with the economic report, attributing the success to one man, economically," said Knight. "Give me a break. Him and El Nino?"

But the El Nino has a great deal of impact on locations nearest to where it occurs, said Knight. The weather perturbation, which comes along about once a decade, has a greater impact on locations (such as southern California with the flooding) nearest the location of the warming.

However, this El Nino stands out because it has created a dramatically warmer winter than any in recent memory.

For instance, Knight noted, last month was the sixth warmest month in Pennsylvania and fourth on records dating back to 1895.

Last year, Pennsylvania experienced the 27th coldest year out of 103 years of record-keeping. It was the 19th driest. This data was taken from the NAtional Climate Data Center.

Second and third place winners in the 5-Acre Corn Club Contest. From left, Joseph Albright, 1997 winner, second place, ear corn class, hand harvest; James Hershey, 1997 champion third place, shelled grain class, 3-acre plus harvest size; and Lee Spangler, second place, 1997 champion, shelled grain, 3-acre plus harvest size.

Novembers have been interesting. November of 1995 was the third coldest for the state on record, November 1996 was the 4th coldest, and November 1997 the 14th coldest. Yet 1996 was the wettest year on record in Pennsylvania, with 53 inches of rain statewide on average and 75 inches in the state's southeast counties. Statistically, that's an event that happens once every 30,000 years, said Knight.

El Nino patterns have occurred in 1982 (the last big El Nino), 1977, 1940, 1911, and 1905. During that time, Pennsylvania overall experienced seven dry springs and one wet one, so the likelihood of a dry spring is "relatively high," said Knight.

But being able to predict what the precipitation will be very far in advance is difficult, Knight noted. "It's hard to be very precise about it," he said. Yet, if global warming has something to do with the El Nino, precipitation may be the issue rather than temperature.

Also, one historical figure that stood out is that, in the past 22 years, the state has experienced cool Septembers.

According to models, "September will be cool here — it seems to be the regime," Knight said.

Knight looked at the records of the El Nino years and compared them with the El Nino of 1997-1998.

What's interesting is how much this El Nino compares to 1982-1983. In December 1982, Pennsylvania residents experienced one of the mildest winter months on record, followed by dry conditions up and down the eastern seaboard. In August of 1983, there was a drought in the Carolinas.

However, in the winter of 1982-1983, the Atlantic water was much colder, compared to this winter, where it is warmer. Could this have an effect on the weather, since in February 1983, two feet of snow covered the southeast Pennsylvania region from a major Nor'easter? It's possible. And part of Knight's forecast. "There still could be significant snowfall," according to his forecast.

Forecasters can predict the weather in one of four ways:

• Persistence approach. It's one of the simplest methods to make a prediction. The theory is, "what it's been's what it will be," said Knight. "You may laugh, but it works more often than not." He noted that the summer of 1992 was wet, 1993 was dry, 1994 was wet, 1995 was dry, 1996 was wet, and 1997 was dry. So using this approach, 1998 could end up having a wet summer.

• The analog approach. What happened in past years forms a pattern. In four of the five past El Ninos, temperatures were above normal in Pennsylvania in December. The December 1977 El Nino was mild, followed by a winter with considerable snowfall. In eight previous El Nino Southern Oscillations (ENSOs, as meteorologists refer to them), in March, four of them were cold, three were normal, and one was mild. In seven out of eight times, March has experienced normal or below normal temperatures. In those same time periods, there were three cold springtimes, four normal, and one mild.

• Numerical approach. This involves analyzing and interpreting real-time atmospheric readings, ocean temperatures, and other factors. This model, ran in the summer of 1997, includes the Tropical SST Anomaly Forecast for 3 Sept. 1997, predicting a return to La Nina. This summer, temperatures are expected to warm up a bit, then return to cold, and it will continue to get colder and colder. The La Nina has a tremendous correlation with cold winters, Knight indicated.

• Statistical analysis approach. This looks at historical figures plus combines a numerical approach. This looks at model likelihoods based on real-time and historical data.

But even forecasters have their doubts about what models to believe.

According to Knight, even though numerical and statistical models predict precipitation for 1998 to be near or below normal in the summer, his instinct is for precipitation to be "above normal," he noted.

Knight noted that information on weather patterns for 60 counties will be available on the state's Internet website soon, with records on temperature, precipitation, growing degree days, and other information.

Soybean Conference

At the Crops Conference, soybean growers received information about new breeding programs at the University of Maryland.

According to Dr. W.J. Kenworthy, University of Maryland professor responsible for soybean breeding, new Roundup Ready soybeans have a yield range of slightly lower than conventional varieties. In one test planted at the Wye Research Center on June 24 and July 3, the highest yielding Roundup Ready variety was 43.2 bushels per acre. Conventional yields were 44 bushels per acre.

Kenworthy noted that, in speaking with seed representatives for the Roundup Ready varieties, the lower overall yield is only a temporary situation and should improve.

"It's an important new tool for weed management," he noted, providing a package of new herbicide management techniques that "really is pretty exciting."

He also spoke about grower's experience with tofu, or food- type soybeans, and with growing soybeans for a new venture, organic dairy products.

Also at the Crops Conference, awards were selected for the Pennsylvania Soybean Yield Contest, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board. The contest is managed by John Yocum, manager of the Penn State Extension Service Southeast Pennsylvania Laboratory in Landisville.

First place and two tickets to the Commodity Classic in Long Beach this month went to Jon E. Stutzman from Berks County. He harvested 67.79 bushels per acre using Gutwein 7410.

Second place and a paid weekend at the Hershey Resort went to Nelson Beam, Chester County. Beam harvested 67.32 bushels per acre using Pioneer 9421, an STS soybean.

Third place and $250 went to Steven Wenger, Lebanon County, for harvesting 67.18 bushels per acre using Hoffman 3396.

Of those who participated in the contest, 61 percent had current soil tests, 44 percent fertilized or applied manure, 67 percent planted before May 10, and 53 percent used min-till and 29 percent no-till. Ninety-four percent of the growers inoculated and 67 percent used a drill. Fifty-six percent seeded in rows less than 10 inches wide and 33 percent in 14-inch to 15-inch rows. Fifty-three percent had plants per acre of 200,000 or more and 94 percent had good weed control.

Grazing Conference Focus: Cost Of 100 Pounds Milk Production On The Farm

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The meeting of farmers working to decrease production costs through the utilization of pastures in grazing was held this week as the 5th annual Southeast Pennsylvania Grazing Conference. Sponsored by the Lancaster County Grazers under the theme of "Increasing Profits in a Depressed Market," soil management and reduction of input costs were the major topics of discussion.

On Monday, Gary Zimmer, Wisconson organic farmer and soil consultant, opened the conference on the premise that the soil is the stomach of the plant. And the plants you feed the cows provide a balanced, healthful diet if the soil nutrients and minerals are also in balance.

"Healthy soils keep the animals healthy," Zimmer said.

Jerry Swisher, Augusta County, Virginia extension agent and grazing consultant, presented profiles of successful grass farmers in Virginia. These farms use grazinge or partial grazing as a management tool to bring down costs. Often total production drops, but the bottom line gets better when farms switch to grazing, according to Swisher's report.

At least one farm in the profiles uses seasonal dairying where a large part of the herd is bred to freshen in the late winter to best utilize the growing season for grass, and the remainder of the herd is bred in the fall to carry the milk flow over the winter.

Jim Landis, a dairyman from Georgia, returned again this year to bring the economics of dairying into focus. He is very critical of articles in Lancaster Farming that show top production, show cows, and promote the idea that milk prices are too low.

In his topic "Do you know your cost per hundred weight?" Landis said most farmers do not know this cost and thus cannot make adjustments to improve their bottom lines. He said you can't do much about the milk price, but you have almost total control over every production cost.

Landis divides these costs into operating and capital use costs. To get started, he said you need to set a period of time and take inventory of everything on the farm at the begining and the end of this period. A one year period is usually best because you include all the seasonal fluctuations.

Knowing the increase or decrease of your inventory of hay, silage, and stored grains is important information you need so you can figure cost per hundredweight. And the change in value of these resources from one year to the next is often overlooked on the bottom line.

Of course you need to account for all your feed, labor, energy, irrigation, and service costs under operating expenses. For capital use costs you should consider the value of your farm and figure the interest costs if you borrowed the whole amount. If you have machinery housed on the farm, count it as a capital expense. If you rent machinery or services, it goes on the operating side. Obviously, lower capital investment lowers your cost per hundredweight.

These three speakers returned for topics the second day of the conference. In addition, Nate Leonard, a grazing consultant from New York State, spoke about how to establish and maintain good stands of grass. And Nevin Mast, a Pennsylvania organic dairy farmer, discussed the problems and methods of making the switch from conventional to organic production.

Tapes of all sessions are available. For more information contact Arden Landis (717) 529-6644.

Weaver Family Earns PASA Leadership Award

started practicing low-input/sustainable farming methods after experiencing family and herd health problems.

The Weavers currently rotate crops on contoured strips, use no pesticides, incorporate predigested manure into the soil within 24 hours, and cultivate their crops. Don believes their 23,000-pound herd average is rising because they've been concentrating on cow comfort, improving the farm's water quality, and growing better forages.

Over 500 people registered for PASA's two-day conference which took place at the Penn Stater Hotel and Conference Center (formerly the Scanticon).

The opening keynote speaker Denise O'Brien spoke optimistically about the future, about creating "a more just and sustainable food system." A farm activist for 21 years, O'Brien raises poultry, berries, vegetables and tree fruit in Iowa. She chairs the Women, Food and Agriculture Network, a support and mentoring organization for women in all sectors of sustainable agriculture. She is past president of the National Family Farm Coalition.

During a session on local cooperative milk marketing, experts from two cooperatives discussed how their co-ops were started. Earl Spencer from Allied Federated Cooperative in New York outlined Allied's services to its members, all county-based, member driven co-ops. "We actually promote MORE co-op start-ups through our federation," stated Spencer. Members of the Pioneer Valley Milk Producers Co-op told how in Western Massachusetts last year, farmers from 60 local dairy operations gathered to explore the possibility of marketing their milk under a value-added label. The "Get Milk . . . Locally" campaign was launched in September and has doubled sales for members in just five months.

Reknown Iowa hog producer, Tom Frantzen spoke about various types of pasture areas, the number, length of time, and animals best suited for grazing, plus fence and water systems. He urged farmers to examine their farming operations for loss of biodiversity, eroding top soil, depleting water resources, and an increasing dependence upon outside inputs. When talking about raising hogs with minimal confinement, which he has done for 25 years, Frantzen humorously added that the ideal hog house pays for itself in three years and self-destructs in five!

Dale and Kate Thomsen of Willow Springs Farm in Bedford County spoke of their poultry and dairy sheep operation. The Thomsens market fresh (not frozen) pastured poultry duriong the summer months and sheep cheese throughout the winter. Although they've chosen not to label their products "organic," the Thomsens believe in raising animals for food in a healthy way.

Jim McLaughlin of the Pastured Poultry Association of South Central New York (PPA SCNY) talked about his organization's growth into a soon-to-be state association. Since its inception, PPA SCNY has purchased a mobile processing unit, enabled its members to buy bulk feed, and increased awareness concerning the importance of sanitation in preventing diseases such as Avian Flu.

In a session on the Milk Marketing Initiative, Lori Sandman, Project manager for the Dairy Network Partnership (DNP), discussed the progress of the Partnership, a collaboration of diverse agencies such as Rodale Institute, Chesapeake Bay Foundation, PASA, Penn State, EPA, and others. The DNP's purpose is to improve environmental quality through market-based incentives to farmers implementing a pollution prevention plan aimed at farmyard improvements impacting water quality.

Featured speaker Kathleen Merrigan, a Washington-based senior analyst for the Henry A. Wallace Institute for Alternative Agriculture close the conference with her Tale of Two Agricultures. Merrigan said sustainability is about agriculture and more. "It's about communities in cooperation, answering a deeper need we all have — to create on earth an environment, in all senses of the word, able to sustain future generations," proclaimed Merrigan, a former staffer for the U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee who serves on the Steering Committee of the National Campaign for Sustainable Agriculture.

The Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture is a member-based organization dedicated to promoting a healthy food supply through profitable farming designed to sustain the environment for future generations. For more information, call at (814) 349-9856, or write PASA, P.O. Box 419, Millheim, PA 16854.

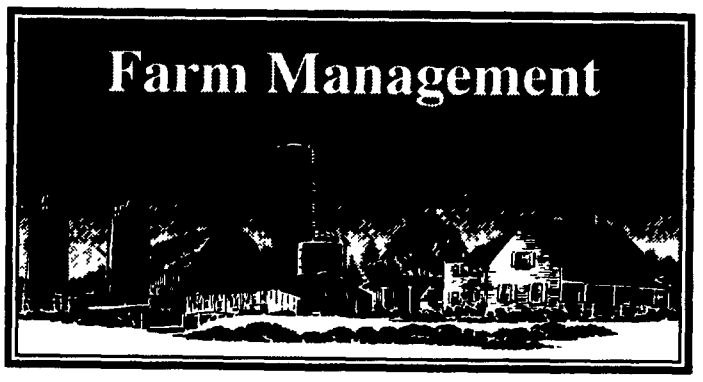
Risk And Opportunities For Profit



JOHN BERRY
Penn State Extension
Lehigh County agent

Risk can not be separated from farming without removing the opportunities for profit.

Agricultural prices will be more volatile over the next 5 years than in the past 5 years. Volatility means sudden and dramatic shifts in prices. These shifts can be a source of gain or loss, depending on your marketing strategy.

The 1995 "freedom to farm" bill encourages fully planted acreage which can result in record harvests. The exit of the federal government from the grain storage function as a market price stabilizer is at hand. The current melt down in Asian markets impacts our largest agriculture buyers of grain and pork.

Additionally, the US is no longer the sole world supplier of farm products. Australia, Argentina and Europe significantly affect the wheat supply. Brazil, China and India are major soybean competitors. China and South Africa are exporting more and more corn. Australia and Argentina continue to build their beef exporting capacity.

Current market factors

Consider the magnitude of the Asian market setback in the past twelve months. Morgan Stanley reports the following declines: Japan, 25%; Singapore, 25%; Hong Kong, 27%; Philippines, 55%; South Korea, 59%; Indonesia, 60%; Malaysia, 68%; Thailand, 75%.

A level of stabilization has not been achieved yet. 25% of the US export market faces slow downs because of the rise in the value of the dollar. Our exports' cost per unit are rising. Cheap imports will depress prices and lower profits in sectors that compete with Asian industries.

The current USDA supply/demand report is bearish for corn and wheat, and neutral for beans. They forecast more carryout corn and increased world wheat supply.

Beans did not change from the previous report. There was increased plantings of early season beans in South America. These soybeans will come to market during the end of April. As the South American's try to capture preharvest premiums, US bean prices could be pressured earlier than normal this spring.

The world market works both ways. The weakened condition of several oil consuming economies could present favorable opportunities to forward price energy needs. Lower input cost for fuel and heat would help offset reduced revenue from exports.

Avoiding the crush

As we talk with our accountants about year end bookkeeping it is a good time to consider the sources of risk in our enterprises.

"Maintaining liquidity or cash flow should be the primary objective" says Leroy Louwagie of Professional Marketing Associates. Consider your ability to meet cash flow needs in an orderly fashion as you review your operation and your debt position.

Another consideration is, does your operation have "depth"? Are others being groomed by sharing in management decisions? Remember your operation has been designed to fit your management style. The lack of next generation management experience can force farm liquidation at distress sale prices.

The winter months are an ideal time to update your marketing plan. Gathering market information is the base of a successful effort. Several sources are available. Subscription services, the internet, magazines and trade papers all offer detailed information. "The use of enterprise accounting and financial analysis can point to areas in an enterprise that are not adding to the bottom line.", states Dennis Ginder, Lancaster County Farm Management Agent.

What do you want to protect in your business? Variable cost of production, total cost of production, normal profits or unusual profits are possible goals. One of the most important considerations of a marketing plan is your own comfort level.

Based on your production history, decide what percentage of expected production you feel comfortable in pricing at various stages of growth. Be sure to include your personality in the calculations. There are no strict formulas for when a particular percent of production should be priced. If pricing 50% of expected production in April causes ulcers, but you can sleep having 20% priced in April, it is obvious which strategy should be considered.

Your brain is the best fertilizer

There are 5 natural breaks where expected production could be priced. Prior to planting, immediately following planting, 3 months from harvest, 2 months from harvest and 1 month from harvest.

After you have determined your comfort level for any of these stages, calculate the price you feel is needed. Write down these entry points. Based on your analysis of the fundamentals in the market decide where you will lock in a price for the expected production. These entry points are a "trigger" for executing forward pricing opportunities.

Now that your marketing plan is complete and written, give a copy to your banker and your broker. The banker needs to be aware of possible margin calls in your hedging account. Now that you have a locked in price for your crop you can lobby for a more favorable interest rate also. The broker will be able to alert you to

U.S. Department of Agriculture.

(Differentials are the premiums paid for milk uses above a standard base price set according to formulae that take into account dairy commodity prices and production commodity costs. The Class I differential is set to pay farmers more for the milk they sell that gets used as drinking milk.)

After the Midwestern federal judge Doty ruled that the secretary of agriculture exceeded authority by unsatisfactorily justifying the setting of the Class I differentials, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman requested and was granted a stay of Judge Doty's order.

The stay was granted to allow the Class I differentials to be paid for milk used for drinking purposes, until the appeals court can rule on Judge Doty's decision.

If Doty's decision is allowed to become effective, it would mean a total disruption of the farm price for milk, and threaten most producer incomes in most states, except Pennsylvania, which has the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board to fall back upon to set an appropriate Class I price.

The ruling by Doty was the result of a civil case brought by some dairymen in the upper Midwest, where Class I prices are paid on about 15 percent of their milk.

The ruling on the USDA's appeal of Judge Doty's decision is expected soon, since the deadline for oral arguments in the case was Feb. 15.

In the meantime, the PMMB had scheduled hearings for Thursday and Friday in the state Department of Agriculture Building.

Trade Tour To China Set

New Tripoli – In just a few weeks a group of Pennsylvania agriculture and agribusiness people will leave on a ten-day study tour of China. They will explore the growing opportunities for agricultural exchange and trade. The group will be led by Kathleen Hamm Jones, a former Pennsylvania Dairy Princess, who has extensive business experience in Asia.

The first event on the tour is Asia's largest agricultural exhibit, called AGRO EXPO CHINA '98 in Beijing April 21-24. Following this introduction to Chinese agribusiness, the group will fly to the northern province of Shandong, where they have been invited to visit agriculture and agribusiness sites, meet with government officials to learn about agricultural investment and technology needs, and opportunities for agricultural and agribusiness trade.

In addition, the group will have the rare opportunity to visit Chinese homes, gaining a glimpse into the daily lives and consumer habits of an average Chinese family Before leaving Hong Kong on May 1, the group will be hosted by the Honk Kong Trade Development Council (HKTDC), where they will learn how Hong Kong serves as an international gateway to China trade and commerce.

Kathleen began to organize the tour shortly after returning to her family's farm in Lehigh County, after eleven years living and working in Asia. After seeing the excitement of the Chinese friends and colleagues who visited her on the farm, and attending the International Trade Show of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in Harrisburg in January, she decided to organize the tour to help people make contacts with each other.

"Trying to figure out the China market without direct contacts is like trying to tell the time by watching the second hand of a clock," says Kathleen. "I want to help people to get beyond statistics and news reports to experience the daily life of Chinese people. After all, China is one of US agriculture's biggest customers. Don't you think we should know more about our customers?"

If every person in China eats one egg a day, to feed the hens would require the entire US annual grain output. That's now. Every year, another 15 million people are added, a few million more than all of Pennsylvania. 65% of all Chinese work in agriculture, compared to less than 2% in the USA. Even if you add in US food processing, it's still only 12%. Though China has 7% of all the land in the world, only 10% of that can be cultivated. "China knows it has to improve its agriculture," says Kathleen. "Chinese are coming to Pennsylvania more often because they want to establish trade relations, and they know of our reputation for fine agriculture and agribusiness. And to quote Ben Franklin, a nation was never destroyed by trade.

The ten-day tour will leave for Beijing from Philadelphia on April 20 and return from Hong Kong on May 1. Kathleen (Hamm) Jones will accompany the tour personally, using her skills in both Chinese and Pa "Dutch" to facilitate exchange sbetween the two sides. In designing the tour, she drew extensively upon her seven years experience as Research Director of ACR, a Hong Kong marketing research company, where she designed and supervised research and analysis of markets in Hong Kong and China, as well as other East and SE Asian nations. Space on the tour is limited. For more information and to reserve your space, you can contact Jones at 1-888-GO-PA (1-888-467-2172) variety and cutting at the right time an produce a lot of forage capability for the grower.

Dennis Calvin reviewed the elements that cause pesticide resistance in plants. He used the example of a lawn, filled with dandelions, of which most of the flowering plants have stems which are at or below grass height. The reason? Because, after successive mowing, only those plants which produce flowers that can survive the lawnmower blades and grow underneath blade height are "selected" to survive, making them prevalent in the yard.

The same applies to the use of herbicides to control weeds.

There may be only one in a million plants that can resist any given herbicide. But eventually, those plants are "selected," eventually, to survive. They become difficult to control.

From 1908 through the 1980s, about 450 different species — including weeds and insects — became resistant to pesticides. Many products for weed control were invented, and it now takes less time for those weeds to develop resistance.

One of the most adaptable insect pests is the Colorado potato beetle, according to Calvin. It has become resistant to a wide array of pesticides. It is even beginning to show resistance to Bt corn.

Producers must adapt new methods of "resistance management" to deal with the beetle. This includes uses of certain pesticides and combining pesticide use, selecting the dose wisely, frequency of application, coverage, and rotation of use.

The "kill them all" anti-insect strategies of the past can help speed up genetic resistance. It's more important now to kill some but allow some to survive, so that resistance is actually slowed down. "Resistance management needs to start before you see the problem," said Calvin.

It's important to leave susceptible individuals in the field, choose short-residue material, leave some habitat for susceptibility, and to tolerate "sub-economic pest densities," Calvin said.

One newer method to control the European corn borer, noted Calvin, is the use of Bt corn. The Bt corn creates a toxin which the borer eats, killing the insect. Many believe this is a biological control element. Actually, according to the entomologist, it's "another pesticide. It sounds like biocontrol, but it isn't," he said.

Calvin outlined ways to keep genetic resistance buildup low with the corn borer. The simple way is to plant one field to Bt corn and an adjacent field, not more than 1,000 feet away, to non-Bt varieties.

Calvin noted that it's important to maintain the long-term viability of Bt corn hybrid technology by managing resistance.

"If not, we could lose this quickly," he said.

At the same time, it's a good idea to not plant all corn fields to a narrow number of varieties. It's a good idea to have variety in the fields. And not every field has enough corn borer at any given time to justify the use of the technology.

The Dairy Compact:

representatives have asked the PMMB to address issues concerning a statewide differential, and separately, to consider extending its over-order premium to all Pennsylvania producers through pooling.

The context for all of this is that the United States is undergoing an historic and dramatic change in policy and conduct with regard to its domestic agricultural production.

As a nation, policy has been steered away from having federal government captain the agricultural production industry in order to ensure low staple food prices through the use of price controls and incentives.

The new direction is to allow commodity demand and customer ability to pay to provide incentives to produce. The new direction also is to allow natural business competition to establish the nature of the industry, such as regions of production, processing and transportation, etc.

The 1996 Farm Bill both outlines and in some cases details the setup for the "weaning" of United States agriculture from federal production programs (though it provides different and expanded incentives for environmental protections).

Also part of the context of all of this is the expanded trading opportunities and timetables established through the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

The 1996 Farm Bill directs a reduction in the number of federal milk marketing orders (FMMOs or F.O.s for federal orders) from 32 to between 10 to 14.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Glickman has made a proposal on the restructuring of the federal milk marketing orders, which is available through the USDA Internet home page. Issued two weeks ago, a 60-day public comment period went into effect immediately.

Under the Farm Bill, as a transitionary aid for producers in the Northeastern United States, authorization was granted for the creation of a Northeast Dairy Compact, whereby the New England states could price its milk through a commission that includes a representatives from the consumer sector.

The Northeast Compact has been in existence for six months, and its impact on dairy production in the Northeast states is of interest.

Telephone calls made this week for information from the USDA Federal Order 1 milk marketing administrator on production levels (to compare before and after Compact) for the region were not returned.

While dairy producers supplying the market there have been receiving higher prices, according to numerous sources, the higher prices could serve as an incentive to increase production in the region.

Since the higher-paying Class I (drinking milk) market is assumed to be fulfilled, any increased production would be directed to the lower paying uses of butter and milk powder.

Since farmers are paid on the basis of an overall "blend" of the uses for milk, increasing the amount used for lower-paying uses would reduce the overall compensation for milk production.

Eliminating artificial incentives to dairy production growth is the key reason for changing the nation's dairy policy.

The Northeast may actually be helped in maintaining a higher price because recent ice storms caused milk losses in New England, New York and Canada. Milk was dumped because of blocked roads and loss of electricity.

If production and supplies were hurt enough, prices should improve, if not at least remain stable.

However, if the higher farm price for Compact producers does prove to serve as an incentive for increased milk production it may result in lowering prices in the months following recovery from the winter storms.

Complicating the whole picture is the fact that included in the Farm Bill is the provision that New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and a couple of other states could join the Compact should three conditions be met: that the state be contiguous to a Compact state; that the state legislature and governor sign into law authorizing legislation; and that the U.S. Congress provide consent.

In addition, the authority and existence of the Compact is to cease in April 1999, when the new federal order system is to be established.

That April sunset date for the Compact doesn't allow much time for the political process to achieve all three steps in order to expand the borders of the Compact. It would seem difficult to achieve by April, much less have farmers receive any benefit.

Farmers in the upper Midwest have gone on record as opposing the Compact because incentives to increase production that results in oversupplying the lower-paying uses of milk will significantly lower their milk check.

Further, Sen. Rick Santorum, the only member of Pennsylvania's current Congressional delegation to sit on an agricultural committee (he's a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee and chairman of its economic and rural development subcommitee), said Thursday that sentiment in Washington is against expanding or extending the Compact.

He said that while the Compact was initially opposed during consideration of the Farm Bill, eventual authority for the Compact was made primarily to benefit only the small, low dairy producing New England states.

Sen. Santorum said it was his understanding at the time that the Compact was being authorized because the New England states represent a small segment of the dairy industry and because the region's political leaders argued that the small family farmers in the area were necessary to maintaining the rural attraction upon with the region's more economically viable tourism industry heavily depends.

Santorum said the Compact was not designed to affect dairy prices nationally, and was not intended for two of the top dairy producing states in the nation — New York and Pennsylvania.

He said opposition would be strong from other states, not only because it would most likely hurt dairy producers there, but because it goes against the entire direction of the Farm Bill — eliminate government supports and pricing.

Actually, until the recent lobbying effort by the new megacooperative Dairy Farmers of America, expanding the Compact to include Pennsylvania and New York was considered a moot issue by many.

Industry Positions

In news releases the DFA has called for opening the Compact.

Gary Hanman, DFA president and CEO states in a DFA news release, "Efforts are underway in almost every state where DFA has members to develop some type of pricing system, which is independent of the pricing system contained in Federal Milk Marketing Orders."

Land O'Lakes, until the DFA merger, was the second largest dairy cooperative. It's position is that it supports expansion of the Compact, but not just for one or two additional states. Land O' Lakes is petitioning for the Compact to be opened nationally, and if that can be done through opening up the existing Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact, then it will seek to do so, according to spokesperson Laura England.

Other organizations have stated support for opening the Compact, though not with the aggressiveness of DFA.

More locally, a small contigent of dairy farmers from northeast Pennsylvania, the same ones who had threatened to dump milk to protest federal pricing methods, has been issuing statements to the media calling for action to join the Compact.

A rally in the state Capitol Rotunda, on behalf of dairy farmer seeking to join the Compact, was recently called for by Pro-Ag, run by Arden Tewksburry of Meshoppen.

There has been no groundswell of support for opening the Compact by either the state Grange nor the state Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

At the state level and in the industry, some have expressed concern that it doesn't make sense to spend several months effort to gain at best a couple to several months of participation in the Compact, given the current issues that need attention and concern, and given that no one has been able to project the impact of adding the milk production of New York and Pennsylvania.

New York and Pennsylvania together produce five times as much milk as the combined production of the six states included in the Compact.

Maryland Farm Bureau wants its state to be included, as do some of its dairy producers. Maryland has been suffering from higher overhead costs than many dairy producers, as well as suffering from depressed milk prices because of out-of-state milk being dumped in Maryland at below-cost prices.

The Maryland government has so far ignored the recommendations of its Dairy Task Force, which were directed at eliminating that discrepency and forcing Maryland producers and processors out of business.

No one has been able to project the effect of opening the Compact, and initial guesses are that milk prices would drop.

But, another issue affecting efforts to open the Compact is that it competes for attention with the proposed restructuring of the federal milk marketing order system. Educational efforts are almost nonexistant for that and the 60-day public comment period is ticking away.

Woods Introduces Ag SkidTools

ROCKFORD, Ill. — Woods Equipment Company introduces 10 categories of Skid-Tools designed for the skid steer agriculture equipment market.

The SkidTools provide an expanded offering of skid steer attachments for a variety of agriculture applications. Woods Equipment Company entered the skid steer attachment market with the acquisition of Dual, Gannon, and Gill.

"As the leading manufacturer of tractor implements and attachments, we wanted to offer a complete line of skid steer attachments designed for rugged agriculture applications," said Lance Hart, agriculture marketing manager for Woods Equipment Company. "Our SkidTools provide the most comprehensive line of skid steer attachments on the market today."

Woods's agriculture SkidTools provide customers with a variety of heavy-duty, utility, material, and multipurpose buckets, as well as snow blades, utility forks, a manure and grapple fork, a pressure washer, and a bale spear. A special TH3000 three-point hitch is also available to allow easy conversion of category 1 three-point attachments to skid steer loaders attachments.

The GP3000 Series buckets feature a low profile, short-lip design for greater visibility and maximum breakout force. With capacities from 9.2 to 18.8 cubic feet, these buckets are available in 48-, 54-, 60-, 63-, 66-, 72-, 73-, 78- and 84-inch widths.

Woods' GP4000 Series buckets offer a low profile, long-lip design for maximum visibility and greater capacity. Capacities range from 14.5 to 20.7 cubic feet with 60-, 63-, 66-, 72-, 73-, 78- and 84-inch widths. Both series include a pre-drilled front edge for an optional bolt-on reversible cutting edge.

Woods' GP5000 Series utility buckets are built for increased versatility. They provide a round design moldboard for maximum loading and unloading efficiency, a square back for reverse grading and a pre-drilled front edge for an optional bolt-on reversible cutting edge. The GP5000 series is available in 60-, 63-, 66-, 72-, 73- and 78-inch widths.

The GP6000 Series material buckets are designed specifically for low density, light material handling. These buckets offer a heavy-duty design, a round design moldboard and capacities up to 30.3 cubit feet. The series is available in 66-, 72-, 78- and 84-inch widths, and is ideal for snow and litter removal applications.

The MP Series multi-purpose, four-in-one buckets are rugged, hydraulically driven tools designed for dozing, clamping, loading, high dumping and grading. These buckets are available in 60-, 66-, 73- and 78-inch widths. The replaceable dozer edge is standard, and the four-in-one buckets also offer a pre-drilled front edge for an optional bolt-on cutting edge or tooth bar.

The DF Series Dura Forks are for heavy-duty applications with load ratings of up to 4,573 pounds. They feature certified forged steel teeth for increased strength and extended life. The Dura Forks provide rail-type double lock downs and a high visibility backguard. They are available in 36-, 42- and 48-inch fork lengths.

The Model 24 pallet forks offer a load capacity of 2,400 pounds. They feature adjustable solid forks, floating bar design, and standard tooth position locks. They are available in a 46-inch length.

The MF Series manure forks offer a sturdy reinforced design for extra strength and extended life. These forks feature replaceable round teeth and a working length of 25½ inches. They are available in 60-, 66- and 72-inch widths with 8, 9 or 10 teeth.

The GF3000 grapple fork attaches to the MF series manure forks for increased versatility. The grapple fork consists of four hydraulically-driven forks that open 35 inches wide for large agricultural material handling jobs.

The GF3000 grapple fork attaches to the MF series manure forks for increased versatility.

Woods' SB Series snow blades offer a high capacity, high strength, 10-gauge steel for greater durability. The curved moldboard with a reversible and replaceable cutting edge provides customers the flexibility they need for a variety of snow removal applications. The blades provide 30 degree left or right hydraulically driven angel adjustments, and are available in 60-, 72- and 84-inch widths.

Woods' unique PW3000 pressure washer utilizes hydraulic power from the skid steer, which eliminates the need for a separate gas or electric motor. Customers can conveniently pressure wash any area the skid steer will go. This pressure washer features a 5-foot hose, gun, and wand assembly and a 65-gallon capacity water tank.

The BS3000 bale spear features a 1¼ -inch diameter drop forged alloy spear for increased strength. The BS3000 also offers two secondary spears for greater bale stability and a maximum capacity of 1,200 pounds.

White Oak Recognizes Service, Safety

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — A Lancaster County-based livestock feed supplier and pork producer recently recognized several of its employees for outstanding years of service and safety at a recent company banquet.

"Since our start in 1976, White Oak Mills has always believed that our company's growth and success directly result from the efforts of talented personnel," said Mark Wagner, White Oak Mills president. "Therefore, we consider our employees to be a valuable company asset."

White Oak Mills Inc., with headquarters located in Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania was pleased to honor and congratulate 17 individuals for their dedication and commitment to quality service.

The following White Oak personnel were recognized for five years of quality service and received a company watch: Stuart Heisey, of Elizabethtown; Lisa Hess, of Columbia; Joseph Kauffman, of Manheim; David Kunkleman, of Shippensburg; Bruce Lemmon, of Newburg; Robert Mikesell, of Port Royal; Jay Rohrer, of Mount Joy; Ronald Shenk, of Manheim; and Brian Welsh, of Manheim.

Also, six employees were honored for working together in various departments to meet White Oak customers' needs. The following individuals, who have been dedicated to White Oak since 1986, received an engraved, mantel clock; Kenneth Heisey, of Elizabethtown; Jean Saylor, of Mount Joy; James Sollenberger, of Orrstown; Paul Swanger, of Bainbridge; Marlin Swope, of Elizabethtown; and Theodore Wiser, of Shippensburg.

Meanwhile, Linda Bickel of Elizabethtown and Warren Heisey of Elizabethtown received special honors and a gift for positively representing the company prior to their recent retirement from White Oak Mills. Bickel served as White Oak's personnel director and a customer service representative for approximately nine years. Heisey served as White Oak Mills' Elizabethtown store manager for over five years.

In addition to service, White Oak Mills recognized individuals who have been safety-conscious for the past year. Batwing Cutter Offers Near-Finish Quality Cut ROCKFORD, Ill. — Woods Equipment Company introduces the Batwing 3240, a 20-foot folding wing rotary cutter that offers exceptional cutting performance and heavy duty construction.

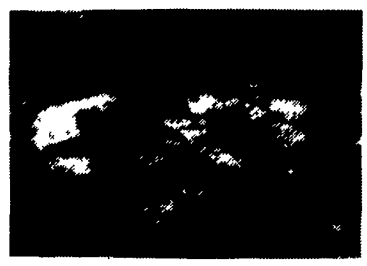
Ideal for production agriculture and highway/rights of way, the Batwing 3240 has a heavy-gauge, high strength steel box frame that provides a strong deck structure, so the top of the deck is free of structural components.

"Because the top deck is smooth, it sheds water and debris," noted Steve Wells, Woods marketing manager. "This prevents corrosion, and can add to the life of the machine."

The machine has several features that enhance cutting efficiency, such as the 240-inch cutting width and an industry-leading blade tip speed.



Batwing 3240, a 20-foot folding wing rotary cutter, offers exceptional cutting performance and heavy duty construction.

"We designed the Batwing 3240 with a 16,000 feet per minute blade tip speed for the highest quality cut from a rotary cutter," Wells said. "For our customers, this means a near finish quality cut, even in brush of up to three inches in diameter."

The Batwing 3240 features Woods' patented Intra-Drive gearbox, which eliminates the need for a splitter gearbox. This results in shorter drivelines, and fewer moving parts for low maintenance and increased reliability. All Intra-Drive gearboxes feature heavy-duty 2¼ -inch diameter output shafts and double spindle shaft seals, and are backed by a 36-month warranty.

The Batwing 3240 also offers a 14-inch deep deck — the largest maximum deck depth of any cutter in its class. This feature increases cut material capacity and reduces clogging. Also, the under-deck baffling controls material flow for excellent clippings distribution.

A self-leveling hitch with four-bar parallel linkage prevents premature drawbar wear. The Batwing 3240 is compatible with tractors rated between 60 and 250 horsepower with either 540 or 1000 rpm power take-off speeds.

Hayes Commends Interest In Egg Safety

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. commended the Center for Science in the Public Interest for its proposal to learn more about the conditions under which eggs are produced.

In surveys distributed in January, the Center is asking supermarkets to respond to questions about whether the eggs they sell are produced under an egg quality assurance program. They recognize the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP) as a program which has been successful in "significantly reducing Salmonella enteritidis (SE) contamination rates in participating flocks."

"Pennsylvania agriculture wants to be pro-active and aggressive in our pursuit of food safety," Hayes said. "More than 80 percent of the eggs in Pennsylvania are produced under the standards of the PEQAP program.

"We are proud of the accomplishments of the program and of our poultry industry's commitment to excellence. The PEQAP label assures consumers that the eggs they are purchasing are produced under the highest safety and quality standards."

Officially begun in May 1996, PEQAP is a public-private partnership between the Ridge Administration and the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation.

Under the voluntary program, producers agree to implement management and monitoring practices most likely to prevent contamination by Salmonella enteritidis (SE). Control procedures and testing protocols were developed from a pilot project by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Nearly 300 Pennsylvania retailers carry eggs produced under the PEQAP label.

The program is carried out through an agreement with the state Agriculture Department, which provides laboratory diagnostic services and oversight of risk-reduction measures, and the state Health Department, which provides technical advice regarding public-health implications and the industry.

The Agriculture Department also promotes proper handling, refrigeration and cooking of shell eggs by food establishments.

"We had thought for many years there really wasn't any difference between feed companies. But, when we switched to Master Mix Feeds in July of 1997 our herd responded with an almost immediate 8 lb milk increase during some of the hottest weather. Our Rolling Herd Average has increased by more than 2,500 lb milk in the 6 months we have been on the program, and we feel this has come from the improvement in the herd's average peak milk from 82.9 to 91.7!

The Skinner's are a sixth generation farm family with the seventh generation working its way up. They have 115 lactating cows plus young stock and farm approximately 350 acres. Corn Silage, haylage and hay are fed free choice with high moisture shelled corn and their custom Prematek concentrate fed twice per day when the cows are being milked. The Skinner's do not use BST. Donald and Suzanne really appreciate the excellent service they receive from Andover Mill in Millington, MD. "We appreciate the way Dave Chance really works with us to achieve our herd goals."

Soup and stews chase away cold weather blues. While it's great to savor the aroma of simmering soups and stews, there is also danger lurking there.

According to Letie Schadler, home economist, soups and stews are at a high risk for spoilage because they are often rich in protein and carbohydrates.

They must be kept hot or cold. Avoid holding the soup in the danger zone (40-140 degrees) for more than two hours total time. Very low heat under a very large deep kettle of thick soup will not maintain this temperature and can ferment and result in a flat unpleasant taste.

For more tips and recipes on soup making, look for the feature story in this section. More tips on food safety and recipes are also available at county Penn State Extension offices.

LETIE'S FRESH CORN CHOWDER

1 cup chopped celery
1 large onion, chopped
1 cup chopped carrot
½ cup chopped sweet pepper, red or green or pimento
1 to 2 cups diced red potatoes with skins on 4 cups chicken broth or chicken bouillon and water mixture
2 cups chopped broccoli pieces, optional
3 to 4 cups corn, fresh or frozen
3 cups milk
½ cup flour or ClearJel
8- to 10-ounces grated four cheese combination or orange American type cheese
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Cook celery, onion, potatoes, pepper, and carrot in chicken stock until tender. Add the broccoli and corn and cook until tender. Mix the flour or ClearJel and milk. Stir into the vegetable mixture to thicken. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Stir in the grated or sliced cheese and let stand for the cheese to melt. Add the parsley and serve. This reheats well.

It may thicken up—if so, add some extra milk to thin if you desire.

Food fads come and go, but potatoes remain a much-loved staple in the American diet.

SWEDDISH MEAT BALLS

½ pound lean ground beef
½ pound ground veal
½ pound ground pork
3 medium potatoes, boiled and riced

¼ teaspoon pepper
¾ cup milk
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 to 3 tablespoons butter
2 cups light cream*

Combine all ingredients except flour, butter, and heavy cream. Roll into balls (approximately 1-inch). Dredge each in the all-purpose flour. Melt butter in heavy skillet and brown the meat balls on all sides, sprinkle the remaining flour over the balls. Add the cream and simmer for 20 to 25 minutes.

In place of light cream, substitute 1 can cream of mushroom soup and 1 can of milk.*

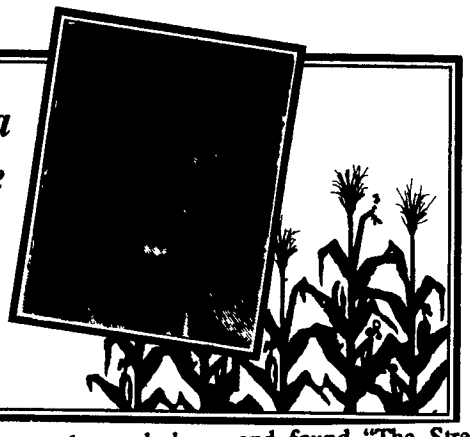
On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp



It was just one of those weeks.

Phone ringing off the hook. FAX busy chewing up paper. Messages backing up in e-mail and a half-dozen projects at once in the computer. Paperwork arriving with each mail delivery. Bills to be paid.

Winter tractor repairs under way — always costly. Haymow nearly empty. And the kitchen floor feels like gravel underfoot.

While waiting for The Farmer to hang up the phone so I could make a call, I began shuffling through a stack of stuff off the desk — and found "The Stress Test." Clipped months ago from some publication and stuck in the "save" accumulation of tidbits that might be useful at some future date. Or, at least good for a laugh.

Question 1 queried as to whether the testee consistently averaged less than seven hours sleep every night.

Seven hours sleep? On a dairy farm? Dare we count evening naps in easy chair induced by endless commercials shown between luge runs and figure skating on the recent Olympics broadcasts?

Next came a query as to if the testee was a caregiver or mother to teen-age or small children. On a stress comparison, two dozen baby calves and five cats (house and barn) aren't even close to those responsibilities.

The next question asked if the testee often feels that, no matter how much one does, it's never enough. That brought to mind the motto that has hung on our bulletin board for a couple of years and which reads: "I believe God put me on earth to accomplish a certain number of things, and right now I am so far behind I will never die."

"Are you frequently quite irritable or impatient when you have to stand in line or get stuck in traffic?" quizzed another question. Irritable at traffic? Me?

"Hey idiot, who taught you to drive?!" I've always wanted to yell at people who do stupid things behind the wheel of a car — like not using turn signals or zig-zagging through traffic on the highways.

Guilty. I plead guilty, your honor.

Next came an absolute no-brainer question: Do you play more than two roles daily, or often find yourself doing several things at once, like talking on the phone while watching the kids?

Or talking on the phone while cooking dinner . . . while writing checks . . . while sweeping the floor . . . while driving to work. Has this test-maker ever heard of the burgeoning popularity of portable and cell phones, for example? Designed for maximizing one's management. Unless one runs into a tree while talking and driving.

Another stress question dealt with one's frequency of losing important things like keys, money, appointments because of always racing the clock. Hummnn, where did I lay that pen I was using for this test . . .?

The query on whether one overeats or eats "junk food" to give oneself comfort, energy or pleasure made me seriously ponder something and dash to check my hidden stash.

Chocolate. What happened to my stash of chocolate? Omigosh, I'm out of chocolate. Aauugghhhh!

One last question put the whole "stress" test into perspective, reminding me why mostd of us ordinary people who operate constantly under the normal demands of daily living don't even think twice about it.

"Are you in a significantly unhappy relationship at work and/or home?"

No. No. And, NO!

And, when one is reminded of the blessing of basic happiness with one's life, stress doesn't seem to be such a big issue. Personally, that has something to do with having lived for more than three decades — marked again this month — with a hubby as laid-back and easygoing about life as The Farmer.

Who, by the way, just refilled the chocolate supply when he picked up hydraulic oil.

Happy Anniversary, Dear.

Understanding Fertilizer

This is the first article in a monthly series on soil and plant nutrition Managing nutrients for a gardener means applying fertilizers properly, improving garden soils with organic matter and protecting soil in the winter

Fertilizers are not plant food! Why? Although it is common practice to call them plant foods, plants produce their own food using water, carbon dioxide, and energy from the sun

Seventeen plant nutrients are essential to plant growth. Nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium are considered fertilizer macronutrients those needed in the largest quantities

What does the 10-10-10 symbol stand for on a bag of fertilizer? All fertilizers are labeled with three numbers These three numbers give the percentage by weight of nitrogen (N), phosphate (P_2O_5), and potash (K_2O)

Nitrogen is important for leaf and stem growth and provides the rich green color in a plant Phosphorous (derived by the plant from phosphate) provides for root and flower growth Potassium (derived by the plant from potash) helps build plant tissue and aids the production of chlorophyll

A fertilizer is said to be complete when it contains nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium. Examples of commonly-used fertilizers are 10-10-10, 16-16-16, and 20-10-5 An incomplete fertilizer will be missing one of the major components A 100-pound bag of 10-10-10 would supply 10 pounds of actual nitrogen, 10 pounds of available phosphorus and 10 pounds of soluble potash. The remaining 70 pounds would be a carrier like limestone.

Slow-release fertilizers release nutrients (makes them available to the plant) over an extended period. Caution is needed when slow-release fertilizers are applied around trees or shrubs, as the later nutrient release may keep the plants growing into the fall when they should be hardening off for the winter.

Cottonseed meal, blood meal, bone meal, hoof and horn meal, fish emulsion and all manures are examples of organic fertilizers. Organic fertilizers usually contain relatively low concentrations of actual nutrients, but they perform other important functions which the synthetic formulations do not. These functions include: increasing organic content of the soil, improving physical structure of the soil, and increasing bacterial and fungal activity.

How do I choose a fertilizer for my garden? Fertilizer materials are prepared in various ways to meet the needs of specific plants. They include dry, liquids, solubles, slow-release, tablets, spikes and packets. Your best bet is to take a soil sample, have it tested and follow the recommended amounts of fertilizer.

Fertilizers are salts, much like our familiar table salt except that they contain various plant nutrients. If tender plant roots are close to the fertilizer granules, water is drawn from these roots. Plant cells in these roots begin to dehydrate and collapse, and the plant roots are 'burned' or dried out to a point where they cannot recover.

It is important to apply fertilizer according to instructions at the proper time and rate to prevent water quality problems. Avoid getting fertilizer on sidewalks and driveways where it can easily wash into storm drains and, eventually, into creeks, streams, and rivers. Nutrients, particularly nitrogen, become a water quality problem through leaching or run-off Leaching is the effect of nutrients being washed through the lower soil layers and into the groundwater supply. Leaching and run-off not only rob your soil of nutrients, but also lead to erosion. Provide your soil with holding power by planting groundcovers in bare spots.

Any questions can be directed to Tom Becker, horticultural extension agents, at (717)840-7408.

Raising enible Kids

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Would you like for your children to be money smart? Do you hope they won't make some of the same mistakes you've made with money?

Money is a complicated subject with lots of emotional ties. It is easy to pick up bad money habits like spending more money than you have and not saving any money.

Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Alabama Cooperative Extension System are co-sponsoring a satellite conference Tuesday, February 24 from 10:45 a.m.-noon on raising "money smart" kids.

enible Kids will be broadcast at the Wayne County Cooperative Meeting room in the basement of the Wayne County Courthouse, Honesdale. This program will help parents, teachers, and others who work with youth to explore principles that underlie the development of financial responsibility in children, learn practical ways parents can help their young children develop "money sense," and use these principles according to the child's developmental stage.

Call the Wayne Conty Cooperative Extension office (717) 253-5970 ext. 239 to make your reservation. The program will be videotaped. If you or your group would like to borrow the tape or have Debra Bryant present the program to your group, call the number above to schedule.

Doing Business from your Home

If your household is like mine, you can always use a little extra money. It seems that coats are forever wearing out and shoes are being outgrown. While the easiest solution might be to get a job (or a second job), leaving the home and working according to someone else's schedule isn't an idea that appeals to everyone. For many people, starting their own business – a home-based business – is a very attractive option.

Home-based businesses appeal to people for a variety of reasons. Many types of products and services can be provided from the home setting. Much of the equipment that was once found only in a large business setting (like the FAX and computer) is becoming part of the home scene. Today's baby boomers find themselves sandwiched between two generations, both needing attention and time, making it necessary to balance income/work and family time. Probably first on many entrepreneurs' list however, is that setting up a home venture means fewer overhead dollars than rental/purchase of a store front or industrial property.

If you think a home business might be for you, how should you get started? First, come up with an idea that might be a good business idea. The product or service should be something about which you know (or are willing to learn) something. Your business may be related to a hobby that you have, or, for farm families, it may involve a value-added product created from raw products already grown/produced on the farm. It may involve some new skill that you have always wanted to build, that you will learn before going into business.

Once you have come with an idea, look hard at that idea. This hard look is often called a feasibility study. You need to see if the idea is "do-able," marketable, and profitable.

A "do-able" idea is a legal one. Check with your local township, borough, or city government to find out whether zoning allows you to conduct your business in your home. Each municipality is different; and some existing businesses may have been "grandfathered in," which means that they existed before zoning was put in place, and are allowed to operate, contrary to an ordinance. Do not assume that land zoned for agriculture can be used for all businesses. Check it out! Find out about any special licenses or registrations needed to operate – and who issues them. For example, food product businesses must be inspected and registered by the PA Department of Agriculture.

When looking at marketability, try to find out who would be most likely to buy your product or service. The group of people who would be your best customers is called your target market. Find out how many people who will see your product or use your service fall into this group. As you learn about your target market, try to find out how many competitors you have. In his book, "Sell What You Sow," Eric Gibson says that it is just as important that a newly-developed product be different from other products already on the market, as it is that the entrepreneur choose something they enjoy producing. At this stage, you need to decide if the market can bear another maker of stuffed bunnies.....

Finally, make sure that you will be able to make a profit with this idea. By definition, businesses are money-making ventures. Some businesses require that you purchase equipment and materials to get things going, so that it is impossible to make a profit in the first six months, year, or two years. However, you must be able to see the light at the end of the tunnel, a time when you will make money, after all the expenses are paid, for an idea to be a good business idea.

If you find you have a good business idea, remember that being a home-based business person doesn't mean that you have to go it alone. There are many sources of help. Cooperative Extension, local college business departments, and the Small Business Administration's Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) all provide free information. Throughout the year, Cooperative Extension will be offering Food for Profit classes for people who want to set up food businesses. In March, the Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce will have their first annual Home-Based Business Conference for current and future home-based entrepreneurs.

Taking time to gather information, will be the first big step so that you can, on your own time, in your own home, take a good business idea and make it into a source of extra income and personal satisfaction. It all starts with a question: "Is a home-based business for you?"

Town Without Milk

SYRACUSE, N. Y. — Black coffee, dry cereal, a sad cop holding a box of doughnuts, and unhappy children sitting around a birthday cake-what do all these images have in common? No Milk. This is the fate of the residents of Drysville, the town without milk and the mythical home to the new series of "got milk?" commercials making their debut this month.

Cleverly produced, these commercials have to be seen several times before the viewer will pick up on all the milk deprivation innuendoes. For instance, in one spot titled "Drysville Cafe," a radio playing in the background announces that the local donut company has filed Chapter 11. In another spot titled "Ballad," a school boy slips money to another boy who opens his locker to reveal a centerfold picture of a gallon of milk.

Although the current "got Milk?" campaign has a national awareness rating of 80%, the creators of the campaign felt it was time for a change. According to Michele Martins, advertising director for the American Dairy Association to Michele Martens, advertising director for the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., "Consumers are so familiar with the campaign, they can usually guess the ending. The point of advertising is to keep the message fresh; the new ads do that, but with a twist."

Created by San Francisco-based Goodby Silverstein & Partners, the new ads were shot in black and white and evoke the kitschy feel of the 1950s. The milk deprivation theme continues—only this time an entire town is without milk. In "Patrol Car," a group of teen-age boys get caught joy-riding across the county line to get milk. "All right boys, drop your straws," the sheriff blares over a megaphone The sheriff explains to viewers how he and his men found several empties on the floor along with some chocolate syrup, "I guess they got tired of drinking it straight."

Soupy Secrets From The Expert

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — You'll having company—a crowd—and the easiest luncheon recipe you can think to make is your Chicken Cream of Vegetable Soup. To allieviate a last minute rush, you triple the recipe and make the soup the day before, and store it in the refrigerator so that all you need to do is warm up the soup when the company arrives.

The next day when you pour the soup into the kettle to reheat, the soup has an unpleasant smell, not the delicious aroma of freshly made soup. It tastes odd, not exactly spoiled but definitely not the yummy flavor that has made it one of your favorites for years.

Panic sets in. What could have gone wrong? You did everything right. In fact, when you first made it, you sampled it and it was wonderful. It couldn't be spoiled—you refrigerated it immediately. But according to Letie Schadler, home economist with the Penn State Extension office in Lebanon, the soup was spoiled. The culprit is the large plastic bucket it was stored in. Never place hot or warm food in a large container before cooling because these hold the heat a long time.

"Soups and stews are at a high risk for two kinds of spoilage—one obvious and one hidden," Letie told participants at a workshop held recently.

Because soups are rich in protein and carbohydrates, the flavor of the soup will change to a sour taste or very flat unpleasant taste when the starch breaks down and ferments. This can happen in the refrigerator if the soup is stored in a large deep container and placed in the refrigerator while hot or warm.

It can also happen if the soup or stew is held at a very low heat on the stove or in a warming server kettle. Or while it is being transported after a soup sale or in a crockpot from one location to another.

Although this type of spoilage may not involve pathogenic bacteria that makes you sick, it does make the food inedible.

"Soup and stew should be chilled quickly by pouring it into a shallow container not more than two to three inches deep. The thicker the product, the shallower the container should be. Refrigerate immediately," Letie said.

Chill large pots of soup by placing them in an ice water bath and stirring until the temperature drops to below 60 degrees. Divide into smaller containers and refrigerate.

In addition to food safety tips, Letie gave several tips on soup making.

• For those who seek to make food more nutritious, keep in mind that red bell peppers have four times more vitamin A than a green one.

• The smaller the garlic clove, the more potent it is. You can drop a whole clove into soup or stews, but remember to retrieve it before serving.

• Thicken soup with Clear-Jel, a modified food starch that has the same thickening power as corn starch but without the clumping problem when you reheat. ClearJel is available in bulk-packaged sections in supermarkets. Do not buy the instant type for this purpose.

• A soup or stew is only as good as the stock on which it is built. You can take a short cut and use canned chicken or beef broth. Also, instant chicken and beef stock powders are available in the bulk food sections.

• For bean soups, there are 29

ANSWER — For Charles Robbins, Idaho, who wanted a Polish recipe Keeshka, here are two from Ms. Messina, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y.

Keeshka

3 pounds pork steak
2 pounds coarse buckwheat grits
½ teaspoon rubbed marjoram
Salt and pepper

Chop meat into coarse bits. Cover with water and boil until tender. Add salt, pepper, and marjoram. Wash the buckwheat grits, cover with the liquid from cooked meat, and steam in double boiler for 30 minutes. Combine the two mixtures. If you have sausage casings, stuff the mixture into the casings. It will keep well in a mold in the refrigerator. Heat before serving.

Dark Keeshka

4 pig's feet, split
2 pound pig's snouts
1 pound pork steak
1 onion
4 whole black peppers
1 tablespoon salt
3 pounds pork liver
5 pounds coarse buckwheat grits
6 large onions
1 tablespoon ground allspice
2 tablespoons ground marjoram
Salt and pepper
1 pint fresh pig's blood

Cover with hot water the first six ingredients and cook until tender. Scald liver, save the liquid from liver and add it to the pork stock. Remove meat from bones and put through food grinder. Chop the six onions and put into hot stock. Wash buckwheat grits and add to liquid. Cook slowly for 30 minutes. Add chopped meat and liver and remaining spices. Salt and pepper to taste. Continue to cook slowly until the grits are tender. If mixture becomes dry, add meat stock or water. When grits are tender, remove from fire and cool. Add blood and mix well. Stuff into casing, tie at intervals to make sausages and cook slowly in boiling water for 20 minutes. If you do not have casings, kiszka will keep well in loaf pans. Serve either hot or cold. To heat, slice and fry in butter until golden brown on both sides. Makes about 12 pounds sausage.

ANSWER — Here's a completely different recipe for the request for Fuzzy Navel Cake. Thanks to Mary Keeler, Seven Valleys, for sending what she writes "is a most delicious cake."

Fuzzy Navel Cake

Cake:
⅔ cup butter
1¾ cups sugar
2 eggs
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2¾ cups flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups milk

Peach filling:
1½ cups diced peaches
3 tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup sugar

Icing:
2 3-ounce packages instant vanilla pudding
3 cups heavy whipping cream
1 tablespoon grated orange peel

Additional ingredients:
⅔ cup peach schnapps
Mandarin orange sections, drained
Peach slices
1 cup finely chopped pecans, toasted and cooled

Cake: Beat butter, sugar, vanilla, and eggs. Add dry ingredients to the creamed mixture alternately with milk. Blend well.

Pour into 2 9-inch greased cake pans. Bake at 325 degrees for 30-35 minutes or until cake tester comes out clean. Cool.

Peach filling:

Cook in small saucepan over medium heat until thick. Cool completely.

Icing: Beat pudding. Cream and grated orange rind until thick and spreadable.

To assemble torte cake layers (cut each layer in half horizontally). Put half layer on serving plate. Brush with peach schnapps. Put on ½ cup peach filling. Top with other half cake. Continue to stack other layers ending with cake.

Spread icing on sides and top. Decorate with orange slices and peaches. Press nuts along lower edge.

At 1:30 p.m., Vic Knauf, a scientist at Calgene, will lecture on the effect biotechnology might have on the food industry, David Geise, president of Furman Foods Inc., will talk about the challenges of traditional food processing.

The afternoon lectures will end with presentations by Robert Beelman, professor of food science; Ramaswamy Anantheswaran, associate professors of food science; and Doug Peck, a packaging expert for International Home Products Inc. At 3:05 p m., Beelman will talk about the challenges facing industries that minimally process foods. At 3:45 p.m., the session centers on packaging processed foods. Anantheswaran will talk about flexible packaging and Peck will give a presentation on semi-rigid packaging.

At 5 p.m., there will be a two-hour poster and exhibit session detailing the latest research, education and outreach initiatives from Penn State, as well as from state agencies and state business assistance programs.

The conference's keynote speaker is John Connor, professor of agricultural economics at Purdue University. His 8 p.m talk is titled "Food Processing An Industrial Powerhouse in Transition." Conner has written four books, including "Food Processing: An Industrial Powerhouse in Transition" in 1996. His research centers on the business organization and economic performance of food processing industries.

The April 16 program opens at 8 a.m. with a session focusing on processing foods for the food service industry. Bernie McGorry, business marketing manager for Hershey Pasta and Grocery Group, will speak on trends and requirements in the food service industry.

The registration fee for the conference is $100 per person, which covers all materials and meals. The deadline for registration is April 1.

Those interested in attending can reserve rooms by calling the Eden Resort Inn and Conference Center at (717) 569-6444. The group rate is $79 per room per night for single or double occupancy. Reservations should be made by March 25 to receive the reduced group rate.

To register for the conference, call the Office of Conferences and Short Courses at (814) 865-8301.

ANSWER — Ruth Ann Greathouse, Lititz, wanted a recipe to make communion crackers or wafers. Thanks to Mrs. Burkholder for faxing a recipe.

Communion Bread

4¼ to 4½ cups flour
1 pound butter, softened
1 quart milk
1 egg

Measure flour, add butter (homemade works best). Slowly add milk, mixing in portions of milk, use as much as needed. These ingredients should make about five cakes, about 1½ pounds each. Knead bread. Roll out to about eight inches wide and ⅜ -inches thick. Make seven strips (about a yardstick width) to each cake. Then cut each strip partially through with paring knife. Jag each strip with forks. Slightly cut strips again with paring knife. Beat one egg and apply to top, being careful not to get in the knife cuts. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes.

ANSWER — Margie Cunfer, Lehighton, wanted a recipe for homemade chicken croquettes. Thanks to a Mrs. Burkholder, address unknown, for faxing a recipe.

Chicken Croquettes

2 tablespoons butter
2½ tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
2 cups minced cooked chicken
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon onion juice or ¼ cup minced onion
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons minced parsley or celery
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup dried bread crumbs

Make a white sauce: Melt butter, add flour and stir in milk. Add finely chopped chicken and seasoning. Cool thoroughly, then shape into balls. Dip in crumbs, then beaten eggs, and again into crumbs. Fry in deep fat for 3 to 5 minutes. Serves 6.

Quick method: Omit cooking; drop in skillet, and fry like pancakes. Good with catsup. Freezes well. Put in tight container. When ready to use, place on cookie sheets and cover with aluminum foil. Bake at 350 degrees util hot.

This is delicious with leftover barbecue chicken.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Even the winter seems to be passing by quickly. I've looked through the brightly colored seed catalog but I have not placed an order. This year two of our children gave me gift certificates, so I can really place a big order. The problem is to take the time to sit and do it.

So far my list includes mostly flowers. You see, I save many vegetable seeds from my own plants. I'll admit that some ornamental gourds and some squash have crossed over the years in which case I never know what to expect from the seeds. But, that is part of the fun in having a garden. One year I have a bumper crop of cucumbers and the next one practically none. One year we have lots of peanuts and the next one I must save the nuts for seed.

Lately I've been meeting a grandchild at his bus each evening as he has a corn-growing project in our basement under lights. He is so very exuberant as he hops off the bus and runs to meet me. He and his siblings run and jump and play in our house and even move big rugs out of place.

One thing that they enjoy doing with me is cleaning the goldfish bowl. But, I must watch them closely as I've caught them holding the fish out of the water, upside down, by its tail. We four often sit on the floor and play with a soft ball on the kitchen floor.

The other evening they enjoyed a box of "Krazy Ikes" and we all made odd little figures. The same books that I read to my children decades ago are now read to the grandchildren.

Kids Korner

Triplets And Twins Herald The Arrival Of Spring

These kids get to play with the lambs at their grandparents 11-acre sheep farm located along Route 896 north of Strasburg in Lancaster County. Actually, when Grandpa and Grandma Siegrist (Elvin and Jane) went on vacation to Costa Rica in January, their daughter and son-in-law June and Jeff Hollinger and the grandchildren Eric and Chad Hollinger and Anthony Smoker cared for the flock of 17 mothers. Five sets of triplets and eight sets of twins later, the flock is bursting with 33 babies all frisky and playful.

To help the boys know which lambs go to each mother, different colored dog collars are used. Many of the lambs have already become pets, each with a different personality.

Right now, the most asked question is "Grandpa, can we keep them all?" And Grandpa is not ready to break any young boys heart just yet

This large number of multiple births in a small Dorset flock is considered unusual. And experts agree whatever the Siegrists are doing in management, they should continue. The flock is a hobby for Elvin who uses the work with the sheep and lambs as a way to relax from his occupation as an auctioneer.

It's all in the acid
First, if you're lucky enough to never have had heartburn, imagine eating the hottest, spiciest salsa ever Now, pretend that as you swallow the salsa, it stops just before it gets to your stomach, right below your last rib Your esophagus (the tube that takes food from your mouth to your stomach) feels like it's on fire That's kind of what heartburn feels like
Here s what happens Gastric glands make acids in the stomach that help digest your food The acid is so strong that your stomach has a special lining to protect it When someone gets heartburn, acid from the stomach pushes through a smooth, muscular valve that is supposed to close off the stomach from the esophagus This tube doesn't have the special lining, so the acids create a nasty feeling People can tone down the acids by chewing gum or taking an over the counter antacid Or, they can take medicines that help block the acids that are made in the stomach
Diet has a lot to do with occasional bouts of heartburn A big meal filled with food high in fat — like what's typical in holiday feasts — take more time to digest The full stomach pushes on the valve muscle, which can cause it to let in some of the acid Too much chocolate, peppermint, alcohol and spearmint can also relax the muscular valve
So to be heartburn-free, pick your foods carefully, and don't overdo the sweet treats Your body will thank you for it later!
Scientifically yours, Twig

McPhersons Cultivate A-Maize-Ing Entertainment

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

NEW PARK (York Co.) — Don't cut through the corn. Don't pull off any ears. No running. No cigarettes!

Got those rules? Then you're ready to take on the challenge of Maize Quest.

After an introductory initiation to the fine art of safely negotiating their way through a corn field, including a pointed warning about how cigarettes can start fires in a dry field, several thousand people did just that last fall at the McPherson family's Maple Lawn Farms, New Park. The southern York County corn maze was one of several such consumer-entertainment outreaches that have been cultivated around the region in the last few years.

Corn rustled as a brisk, fall breeze stirred through the drying stand of upside-down ears and drooping, brown stalks.

A cricket dashed across a packed path, seeking a haven from a pounding by passing sneakers.

And a gleeful cluster of chattering church-group members gathered to add yet another section to their map of the intricate corn maze. If they could complete the map, it would show them the way out.

Maize Quest was truly a family endeavor of the Paul and Gail McPherson clan, longtime advocates of educating the consuming public about where food originates. From their U-pick orchard to periodic newsletters sent to a wide mailing list of customers, the McPherson's Maple Lawn fruit and grain operation has always been on the leading edge of agriculture-education activism.

Sharing in the major planning and implementation of Maize Quest, with its heavy emphasis on information along with entertainment, were siblings Hugh and Gretchen McPherson. Hugh, a recent Penn State graduate with an ag business degree, combined his interest in undertaking a new farm venture with the art degree of his sister, Gretchen, who lives in California.

Their brainstorming birthed the Maize Quest idea months before the first corn seed went into the soil. Hugh had heard about other mazes in the area and saw it as an extension and alternative use of the farm's normal planting of a large acreage of grain corn. They envisioned a corn maze that would not only entertain visitors, but

New PMCGA President Wants Vote On Corn Checkoff

ANDY ANDREWS

SHELOCTA (Indiana Co.) — Chris Kimmel is steadfast about his plans.

The new president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) intends, within the next two years, to put a referendum before the state corn growers

That referendum will address the question. will Pennsylvania have a corn checkoff?

Already, the PMCGA knows the direction it must take At the Crops Conference in Grantville early this year, corn growers [illegible] heavily in crops, including about 800 in corn. The passing of a checkoff, calculated at point of sale and based on a similar program in Maryland, would mean a lot to the commercial growers who want to see better promotion of the product, in addition to money for research at land-grant universities (Those same universities are already experiencing the withdrawal of government money — those dollars have to come from somewhere)

This is the first time Kimmel has served as president of PMCGA, although he has served as vice president for a few years He serves on the corn [illegible] the Ken and Connie Rutt, who have travel extensively, are forming the International Exchange 4-H Club to give 4-H'ers a chance to develop friendships with youth from other countries. The Rutts believe that the only way to bring the world closer together is through understanding.

Newly-Formed 4-H International Club To Build Relationships With Other Cultures

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) —"The only way to come closer in the world is to understand each other," Connie Rutt said.

One of the most effective means in understanding others is to live together, learn to know each other's families, friends, and talk together.

Connie and her husband Ken are doing their part in bringing the world closer together. After years of traveling throughout the world and in opening their home to international visitors, the couple is forming a new 4-H club. Called the International 4-H Exchange Club, the purpose is to educate 4-H'ers about another culture and give them a chance to experience it.

Connie has taken five trips to Poland through the Penn State Extension. She took part in the International 4-H Camp with students from several European countries such as Hungry, Poland, and Lavia, and helped set up a 4-H program in Poland.

Several county 4-H'ers were selected to participate in a 4-H exchange with Poland.

"It was life changing," said Gerald Boyd, one of the participants.

He was especially intrigued with the importance of multi-generational families in the Polish culture. "All the members of the family came home at lunch time just so they could spend time together," he said.

Team members spent three weeks living with a host family in Poland. Gerald and other teens said that the experience made them much more aware and grateful for what they have.

"I had more clothes in my suitcase than my host sister had in her whole closet," one 4-H member reported.

Attitudes and concepts such as these develop naturally when students become immersed in other cultures.

In addition, participants are amazed to find out that youth in other countries know a lot more about the United States government and history then they themselves know.

"We want the International 4-H Club to be an educational experience. We will study about the country we will be visiting," Connie said.

In addition, the club will visit nearby attractions with a cultural influence and learn to cook foods typical of the area.

"Members who join the International 4-H Club can give input into selecting the country to visit, but it must be a country that has invited us," Connie said.

By that, she is referring to countries that have seen how Penn State Extension has helped Poland and have issued invitations for the Extension to come and do the same thing in their countries.

The Rutts don't want the International Club to be made up of members whose parents can afford to pay their own travel costs. Instead, they want members to raise travel costs through fundraisers and other ingenious events.

"I am amazed at the ideas youth come up with," Connie said. "One fellow offered to clean up for farmers and collected scrap metal that he sold.

Transportation costs are the primary expense since youth stay with host families and have basically all food and sightseeing costs provide by the hosts.

The Rutts have been foundational in the success of the county 4-H program. Both were 4-H'ers growing up. In fact, they met each other through 4-H. They have both served as 4-H volunteer leaders for 21 years and have raised three children who were active in 4-H clubs.

In 1984, the Rutts participated in a farm tour that covered eight European countries. Since then, they have traveled independently to numerous countries.

The Rutts sold their dairy cows within the last year, but continue to crop farm their Quarryville farm called Edgefield Farms with their son Phil. A daughter is married and has lived in Mexico, Russia, and now Hungry. Another son is a civil engineer in New Jersey.

For the past three years, Rutt has been involved in an agriculture project in Nigeria. In a joint venture with the United Nations, Rutt has been breeding native West African cows by using artificial insemination of Brown Swiss, Jersey, and Holstein breeds.

Rutt said that the African cows produce little milk because they go months without eating and drinking much. A group of native doctors who had studied in the U.S. and returned to their country want to encourage milk drinking among their people to prevent numerous illnesses and deficiencies.

Diabetes is prevalent in Nigeria, and a theory is that sugars in milk prevent diabetes.

"Because the native doctors are behind this venture, it isn't like the U.S. coming in trying to change their culture," Rutt said.

Rutt travels to Nigeria about three times annually and spends several weeks at a time there. Rutt's goals are not only to produce milk, but to show the natives how to produce milk and to provide employment for the natives on the ranch.

Although the natives are curious and watch insemination closely, they are skeptical. It's difficult for the natives to understand a concept that they can't see.

Rutt is confident that when they see the offspring, they will want to have their cows bred also.

Using the latest technology in breeding cattle, Rutt said they have had an unbelievable 94 percent success rate in breeding.

The ranch is located in an isolated area. People live in huts and farm completely by hand. No electricity or refrigeration is available.

He said that many techniques that American farmers take for granted are not easily understood in other cultures. For example, after he assisted in planting corn to feed the chickens and the chickens were consistently laying eggs under his watchful eye, Rutt left and was told that the chickens had stopped laying eggs. Upon further inquiry he learned that the chickens had not been fed for several days.

He also had a difficult time convincing the natives to plant only one corn kernel per hole. He needed to show them how it grew when only one was planted in the hole but if four were planted there nothing could be harvested.

Artist Expresses Soul Through Watercolors

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — From fragile flowers to animals, her soul seems to be expressing itself when Shirley Tataleba puts her paintbrush to work on the watercolors she loves so well to do.

Rich hues and mysterious shadows of the hibiscus blossom, for instance, may leave one caught in its cares for untold moments, as if it were the reality.

And her brush lovingly captures the corralled horses the native farm girl imagines grazing in a fenced field.

"I was born and raised on a farm," says Shirley, indicating in the panoramic landscape visible through the picture window, Whitehorse Mountain where she grew up.

"I love animals, especially my little Mitzi," she says, alluding to a nearby Siamese house cat. She adopted it from the assorted feline orphans housed at the humane society's local animal shelter.

A devoted wife of 45 years to husband, John Tataleba and mother of their three children — Gail, Gary and Gwen — Shirley was a busy homemaker who handmade most of their clothes when the kids were younger.

Later she held part-time jobs, but in the housewife's deepest heart, an artist was waiting to be born.

The opportunity came in the summer of 1980 when Gwen was college bound. Shirley enrolled in a class that Laurel Arts in Somerset was offering.

"I started with oils first because I thought it would be easier," she recalls.

Then in 1987 she painted her first watercolor.

I wasn't pleased with my first watercolor," Shirley says, retrospectively. I just had no control. It was very amateurish," the late bloomer, who in essence resembles the beauties pollinating on her studio work table, reports.

A still life oil painting of old crocks, however, was her first sale, after a friend who worked at a local bank had urged Shirley to display it there. The reminiscent piece soon attracted a buyer.

"I was happy, but at the same time," she remembers, "I felt a sense of loss."

Whether or not she felt like working, Shirley developed a paint-everyday habit that takes a recess only on Sundays.

"I have to be almost psyched up to paint," she says. "Once I get started the creativity begins to flow."

As her confidence grew, the home florist, and — to her daughters — an exemplar of homemaking arts, Shirley began entering competitions, encouraged to the place where her works, alongside those of other artists, could be judged.

By 1989 the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Club Photography Competition had awarded her a state second place.

Then came the Harley Hotel Award at the Penn Hills (Allegheny County) Arts Council Show in 1992, and on, until the awards — 13 in all — last year found her named 1997 Somerset County Woman in the Arts by the General Federation of Woman's Clubs.

While watercolor is her preferred media because she so likes its softness and its transparency — "Its luminosity seems to be a natural for capturing the iridescent color of flowers," she said; the artistic explorer also delves into other mediums to discover new possibilities.

These include pen and ink, charcoal, mixed media, and oriental painting.

"I see something that catches my eye and a painting begins."

When a critique of her work is needed, her retired, reliable spouse give Shirley an honest opinion about it.

On the thickly-covered framing table, the skills she learned in framing class are put to use as she and John, together, encase the finished paintings behind glass.

"Did you say I was retired?" interjected John upon overhearing his better-half saying so. "I didn't know that," he added, teasing her.

Shirley Tataleba did this watercolor of irises on rice paper. Her one-woman show in the Holmes Gallery, Latrobe, Westmoreland County runs from Feb. 13 to March 27.

"It's very important to have good lighting. I prefer to paint with natural light," she says. Fluorescent lamps give supplemental lighting directly over the painting table.

"Working in a flower bed is relaxation," Shirley, a grandmother who rides horseback with her four grandkids, said, adding merrily, "but John won't let me plant anymore flower beds."

The two and a half-acre site on a small knoll that skirts the borough should support any number of decorative plots without crowding John too much. They moved into the ranch-style house in 1960, Shirley said.

Inside, none of the wall hangings have the "Shirley Tataleba" signature on them.

"I never hang my own paintings in my house," she says. "I would be forever critiquing them."

Neither does she give her paintings as personal gifts because another person's taste in art cannot be predicted, she said.

From Feb. 13 through March 27, Shirley's work will be featured in a one-woman show at the Holmes Gallery in Latrobe (Westmoreland County) Hospital.

The Holmes show, her fourth at the venue, will exhibit all mediums, including watercolor on rice paper, pen and ink, that Shirley has done.

She and John, with heavy cardboard and blankets will carefully pack each of the 25 fragile, varying sized pieces into the family car for the drive to Latrobe. Their road time to the gallery will exceed one hour.

"We have our system," the organizer who is affiliated with three area galleries, said. They are From the Heart in Somerset, Tub Mill Art Gallery, Salisbury and the Dogwood Gallery at Seven Springs Mountain Resort, Champion. All are located in Somerset County.

Life's vagaries no doubt account for the musicianship that bypassed Shirley and John but made a strong showing in their kids.

Likek his two granddads, Gary is a violinist. Gwen, an alumna of Penn State, played clarinet in its Blue Band.

Gary is unmarried and Gwen's husband is John Hartman.

Shirley's father-in-law, who in 1912 migrated from Europe to the United States, later handcrafted a cello for her and violin for his son, John.

Although "Pap," is no longer living, his survivors, especially, granddaughter Gail, Dwight Smith's wife, is highly interested in the family's European roots.

That's why, the information that Shirley saw in a publication of the Pennsylvania Watercolor Society about an artist in the Ukraine, was so exciting for the mother-daughter duo who, currently, are working on a genealogy.

To make a long story short, the artist was recently contacted. He shortly astonished the Tatalebas by locating John's first cousin now living in the Ukraine, and helped them make the connection.

In hand they have a letter, but are waiting for an opportune time in the schedule of their interpreter who will reveal the contents of the neatly-written communication.

Besides the Pennsylvania Watercolor Society, Shirley belongs to the Bedford County Arts Council, Somerset County Artists Association, Laurel Arts, Tub Mill Arts, and the Allied Artists of Johnstown.

Her paintings have appeared in shows throughout western Pennsylvania and Maryland including the Japanese-American International Watercolor Exhibition tour and the Cumberland Valley Artists Exhibition in Hagerstown, Md.

Shirley credits God with the limitless inspiration that nature itself provides.

"I feel God has given us so much beauty to enjoy," she says in summary of all the Creator has given to his children everywhere.

"Bigger than life, almost like you can get into them," says Shirley Tataleba about her watercolor of pink hibiscus.

ture. You often take three step forward and then three backwards. It's frustrating but of no use to get upset. Flexibility is the key word when working with other cultures," Rutt said.

"When you see the potential outcome, it helps to keep me patient," Rutt said.

"It's a tremendous experience and challenge. If the program is successful, it will have impact upon all of West Africa. Even if I never go back again, the country now has the genetics that took hundreds of years for this country to develop," Rutt said.

Rutt's Nigerian venture is totally separate of the 4-H International Exchange Club.

A 4-H trip to Nigeria is completely out of the question because the U.S. has sanctions against Nigeria and it is not a safe place to visit.

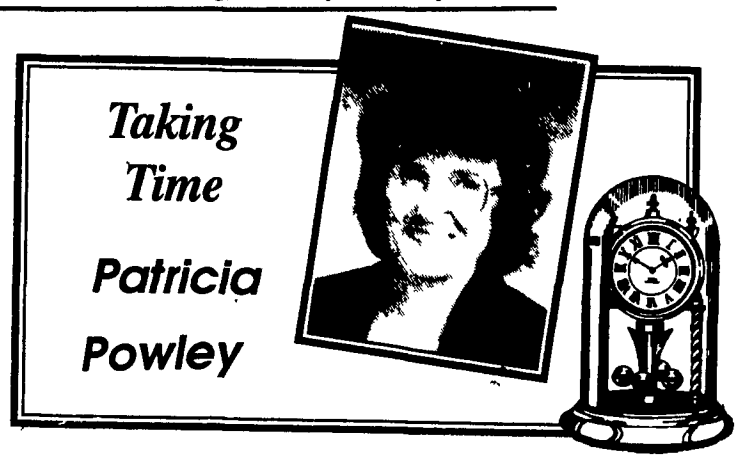
However, Rutt has diplomatic immunity and finds the venture with the United Nations exciting.

The Rutts believe that working with other cultures is the key to developing understanding between nations.

Those interested in joining the newly-formed International Exchange Club must meet the following criteria:

- must be 13 years old by Jan. 1 to join the club.
- must be 16 by Jan. 1 to travel.
- Must belong and be active in at least one other 4-H club.
- Must keep blue forms, scrapbooks, pictorial journals of 4-H involvement.
- Must actively participate in meetings and fundraisers during hosting and travel years.

The first organizational meeting will be held at the Farm and Home Center on March 24 at 7:30 p.m. Those interested in the possibility of joining the club are encouraged to attend. For more information, call the Rutts at (717) 786-3591 or Vonnie and Ralph McLaughlin at (717) 548-3798.



When Friends or Family Ask for Money

How do you respond to a friend or relative who asks to borrow money or asks you to co-sign a loan? Lending money is a business transaction with financial risks Lending money to family and friends, in addition to being a business traction, is a personal transaction and affects relationships that are very important to you. At its best, lending money to a friend or relative is a way to help someone you love. At its worst, lending money to a friend or relative destroys a meaningful relationship

Before lending money to a friend or relative, consider the entire situation – your situation and the situation of the person asking for money. Will the money solve the problem of the person asking for help? How will giving financial assistance affect your present and future financial situation.

Is money the problem or the symptom?

When a person asks for a loan, he or she thinks money will solve his/her problem. And, sometimes it does. For example, when a person has had unexpected expenses or reductions in income, your loan helps that person through the temporary crisis You may even prefer to make a gift rather than a loan

However, money may not be the problem, but rather the symptom of the problem Lack of money may be caused by chronically living beyond one's means

When spending continually exceeds income, the only solutions are to increase income or decrease expenses. Life changes are necessary to increase income and/or decrease expenses.

Money problems also may be caused by drug, alcohol, and/or gambling addictions. If the money problem is a symptom of one of these, your loan, rather than solving the problem, allows this person to continue to ignore or deny the real problem Some clues that money is a symptom of other problems are:

- The person has borrowed from you or other friends and family members before and not repaid as promised.
- The person asking for money is vague as to why he/she needs the money
- The person doesn't want you to tell other friends or family member he/she has asked for a loan.

Can you afford to make a loan?

Before lending money, look at your financial situation. What large expenses will you have in the future? What changes might you experience in income? Can you really afford this loan? Saying no may be difficult, but not saying no may be even more difficult

If you do make a loan, what are your expectations for when and how the loan will be repaid? Be clear about the expectations of both the lender and the borrower. Put expectations in writing. Be sure the loan document includes the amount of money you are lending; the interest rate, if any; the date by which the loan must be repaid; and description of any collateral.

You may want to purchase a form called a "promissory note" at a stationery or business supply store. If there is collateral and/or if the loan is large, you may want an attorney to prepare or review the lending agreement to protect you in the event of nonrepayment and/or bankruptcy, divorce, or death of the borrower.

It's your choice.

When a friend or relative asks you for financial assistance, it's your choice. Think through the situation – both the financial and the emotional aspects. what will the loan do for your own and the borrower's financial situations? How will giving or not giving financial help make you feel about yourself and about your relationship with the person seeking help? How might making or not making the loan affect your relationship with other family members or close friends? Remember, it's your money and your choice.

Extension Program Eases Leaving The Dairy Business

NEW BLOOMFIELD (Perry Co) – Retirement, health concerns, excess debt, a desire for more free time. All of these are reasons why dairy producers decide to leave the business.

Wether you are retiring and selling cows, machinery and real estate, or just moving from dairy to another agricultural enterprise, planning is the key.

Proper planning may help avoid needless legal problems, excess income and capital gains taxes. Planning will also help ensure the proper paperwork for Social Security and Medicare benefits.

"Exiting the Dairy Industry in an Orderly Manner" is a program designed to help plan. Everyone now in the dairy industry will leave at one time or another

If you are thinking about leaving the dairy industry in the next five years, this program is for you.

The two day program will be held on Monday, March 9 and Monday March 16, at the Walker Grange Hall, Mexico (Juniata County), located 1.5 miles off the Port Royal exit of Rt. 322.

The program will feature a panel discussion by several dairymen who recently left the business. They will be discussing what advice you need to seek when making the transition from dairy production.

The program will also feature John Becker, a lawyer from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, who will be reviewing the types of legal advice needed and where to get quality advice pertaining to agricultural and estate issues.

The second day, Larry Jenkins, professor with Penn State' College of Agricultural Sciences' Farm Management department will review tax implications of selling the farm, and/or cows, and how to proceed to minimize the tax liabilities, saving as much of assets as possible.

The program will also feature a presentation by a Social Security field officer dealing with Social Security and Medicare benefits for those who are at or close to the age of retirement.

The registration fee for the program is $20 for the first person from a farm, $15 for each additional person. The fee covers lunch for both days of the workshop as well as educational materials. The program will run from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m each day.

For further information and/or registration, call the Perry County Cooperative Extension Office at (717)582-2131, ext. 243. Registration deadline is March 3.

Consuming Thoughts

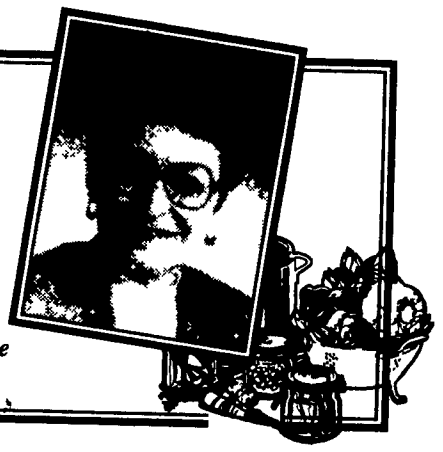
Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



As Lenton season approaches, you'll find many specials on finfish and shellfish at the supermarket. If you're looking for a new way to serve seafood, why not try steaming.

Steaming offers one of the best preparation methods for accenting the natural tastes of seafood. The delicate textures and pure flavors are enhanced because the seafood cooks in its own liquid.

Steaming fish and shellfish is easy. In poaching, food is cooked in liquid; in steaming, over liquid. Any seafood can be steamed–fillets, steaks, dressed fish, and shellfish in the shell or shucked

Fish and shellfish can be cooked over water alone or over liquid to which you've added seasonings such as wine and fresh herbs. Flavored liquid will impart a subtle taste. Seasoning the seafood itself will give a more distinct flavor. Steamed seafood needs little or no fat for cooking

Shellfish in the shell can be steamed to preserve juices that blend with the cooking liquids to form a broth Try steaming clams over water, wine or fish stock to which you've added herbs, butter and garlic When the clams are done, serve the liquid as a dripping sauce Do not, however, try this with oysters The shells can't be cleaned well enough to yield a potable broth.

Lean fish such as flounder, grouper and snapper are generally better steamed than oily fish.

A variety of steamers is available, ranging from electric to stove top to bamboo. Or you can improvise Use a collapsible vegetable steamer, colander, roasting trivet or roasting pan with rack. Always oil the rack or steamer except when steaming unshucked shellfish. Be sure to use a pot large enough for steam to circulate freely. And use a tight fitting lid.

A great way to steam seafood is to arrange it is a shallow dish above the liquid. Use a low, flare-sided, heatproof platter. If you don't have a rack, support the dish with a trivet or canning jar rings.

Seafood steamed in a dish collects juices. The flavorings are not lost, but are more pronounced. Use the juice in place of sauce or as the base for one.

For a basic steamed fish dish, arrange four fillets or steak on platter. Pour a couple tablespoons of dry white wine over them. Sprinkle with salt, freshly ground black pepper, minced green onion and minced fresh parsley. Set the platter over steam, cover and cook until the fish flakes easily with a fork, about eight to ten minutes. An easy dinner for four.

A Yunnan pot is popular for steaming. It s an unglazed clay or glazed ceramic bowl with a lid and a central chimney. Food is placed in the trough surrounding the chimney. The pot is set over a saucepan of steaming water. Steam rises up the chimney, condenses on the lid and falls over the food in a light mist.

Cooking in a brown-in bag is also a form of steaming. You can also use packets of aluminum foil. But do not use foil if the recipe contains any acidic ingredients.

The amount of liquid needed for steaming is determined by the cooking time. For most seafood, about an inch is required. With a bamboo steamer, use more. Pour the liquid to within an inch or two of the steamer base.

Start the cooking time when the liquid begins to boil, steam is visible, and food is placed over it and covered. The liquid should bubble but not boil vigorously. Remember that fish will continue to cook in a covered pot after the heat is off. Removed the seafood from the steam as soon as it is done.

Farming With A Traumatic Brain Injury

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — It is important to recognize that an individual who has experienced a brain injury as a result of a stroke or blow to the head may have varying limitations including memory loss, dizziness, fatigue, instability, paralysis, decreased reaction time, loss of coordination, cognitive impairment, visual and other impairments, and impulsivity. Those with a brain injury also may recall their previous abilities and not be aware of their new ability level. They need to recognize the effect of their new ability level on safe performance of farm tasks.

Farmers who have returned to work on the farm after a brain injury offer the following suggestions:

1. If the doctor says you should not drive a car, do not operate farm machinery.

2. If the doctor says you can drive a car with modifications, the same applies to farm machinery. Consult a rehabilitation professional for modifications.

3. Wear protective head gear, such as a helmet, at all times when performing farm-related tasks.

4. Use appropriate mobility aids to help prevent falls, Examples are a golf cart, lawn mower with adaptations, appropriate wheelchair or special cane tips for maneuvering on ice, snow and loose gravel.

5. Those with paralysis on one side of the body may need assistance mounting and dismounting farm machinery. Consider additional steps, wider steps, steps made of non-slip material and additional hand-holds to help prevent falling.

6. When vertical climbing is needed, consider a lift, back support rings or stairs, or leave this task to someone else. Avoid vertical climbing if there is a risk of getting dizzy.

7. Be cautious around livestock because they are so unpredictable. Consider fence line feeders or automated feeding systems, raised decks for hogs, appropriate livestock holding equipment, or delegate livestock chores to someone else.

8. Individuals with decreased thinking (cognitive) skills should consult with medical professionals about what activities they could perform with supervision or prompting aids, such as a job coach, color-coded measuring devices, memory aids, closed-loop tape machine with repeating messages, and outdoor communication devices.

9. Adaptations or modifications should be used only by the individual for whom they were designed. Use by another individual may cause injury.

New 4-H Agent For Lancaster County

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) —Some people always know what career they want to pursue. Others find life steers them into unexpected places—rewarding positions.

Katina Showman falls into both these categories.

"I always wanted to be a teacher," she said. She pursued an elementary teaching degree with a minor in volleyball coaching at Wilson College. While there, she participated in a scholarship program similar to the work/study program. Instead of working on campus, Katina worked as a volunteer with the Franklin 4-H Extension program in exchange for scholarship money from the school.

As a 10-year 4-H member, Katina was well acquainted with extension services. But instead of being a 4-H'er, Katina learned what it's like to lead 4-H clubs, plan presentation night, and perform other staff duties.

"As a member, I never imagined all the time, money, energy, creativity, and patience that agents and leaders contribute to the program," Katina said.

Later, Franklin County hired Katina as a summer assistant.

"As much as I liked 4-H, the thought never occurred to me to have a career in extension," Katina said.

The first year after college graduation, Katina worked as a substitute teacher and coached volleyball at her alma mater. During the summer months, she worked in the Wilson College Alumni office.

When a former coworker at the Franklin County Extension office heard about the opening for a 4-H agent in Lancaster County, she encouraged Katina to apply.

In October, Katina was named 4-H agent coordinator for the county.

Working with her is Lori Little, who is the 4-H agent in charge of animal projects. The two replace former 4-H agent Zoann Parker, who was appointed Pennsylvania Deputy Secretary.

Katina is excited about the change in her career plans. She said, "Although my job isn't the same as teaching a classroom, my training in elementary education is suitable for this job. I'm in a position to influence youth and help them into a positive growth experience and to gain goals—that's what my heart was set upon."

Katina steps into a position that has one of the strongest 4-H programs in the state.

Concerning the responsibility of overseeing 4,000 members and 600 volunteer leaders, Katina said, "I feel confident because of the helpfulness of the other agents in the county and in surrounding counties. Martha Gregory, 4-H agent in Lebanon County Extension, is my mentor," Katina said.

Planning and organizing are vital in her position, but it's seeing the events unfold that is most exciting to Katina.

One of the major events is the 4-H Benefit Auction scheduled for today.

"The auction raises lots of money for the 4-H program and helps keep costs down," she said.

Katina wants to tackle the myth that 4-H is only animal projects.

When she worked at an information booth at the state Farm Show, Katina said, "Again and again, people would say, "But I don't live on a farm. . . ."

"You don't need to. Neither do you need a sewing machine. 4-H has something for everyone," Katina tells potential members againa and again.

Katina said that stepping into her position was greatly eased with help from Lori Little, who after working as a 4-H assistant for several months, was named 4-H extension agent in charge of animal projects.

Lori, too, has a background rich in 4-H experience. She was a 4-H'er in horse, judging, beef, and community clubs. She studied ag education at Delaware Valley College with the intention of becoming either an ag teacher or a 4-H agent.

Lori especially is fascinated with embryology projects that she takes into school classrooms.

Teaching embryology in the classroom offers her the best of both worlds, she said. "I am the star of the show, but I don't have the responsibility to displine the students. I can leave."

Lori also enjoys working with horses and dairy projects and seeing the kids excel in them.

It was through showing cows about six years ago at the Farm Show that Lori met her husband-to-be Christopher Little. They married this past June and live on five-acres in Nottingham where they raise a pampered puppy named Sierra.

Lori is in the process of helping develop a curriculum with the Dept. of Environmental education and Penn State.

"We want to present a factual curriculum without a slant," she said.

The Lancaster 4-H is led by co-ordinator Katina Showman, left, and Lori Little, who oversees animal projects.

Katina was a 4-H member for 10 years and worked in the Franklin County Extension for 2½ years before coming to the Lancaster Extension Office.

Livestock Club Recaps Successful Year

LOU ANN GOOD

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) —Members, families, leaders, and buyers associated with the 4-H Woolies and the Red Rose Beef clubs celebrated at the annual livestock banquet held recently at the Country Table Restaurant.

The combined banquet is held because many of the members belong to both clubs. Throughout the evening members reflected on the past year of hard work, the successes in winning ribbons at competition, and even on the lessons that can be gained from disappointments.

Excitement mounted as members waited to hear the names of the recipients of the most coveted awards. For the sheep club, the most pretigious award is the Shepherd of the Year award.

"I am totally shocked," Travis Donough, 17, said after he was named the recipient. As a reminder of this achievement, Travis, who is president of the sheep club, was given a hugh traveling trophy for one year. Next year, when he returns the trophy, he will be giving what is called a retiring trophy.

The most coveted beef club award is the Jason L. Weaver Memorial Leadership Award. Jill Hoffines, president of the beef club, received the award for showing outstanding leadership qualities. Jill, 17, was also the recipient

The scholarship award is given to the member who has excelled academically in school, been successful in the show ring, has participated in many 4-H activities, and represented the county at the National 4-H Congress in Memphis, Tenn. Jill plans to continue her education at the Pennsylvania College of Technology, majoring in floral design/interior plantscape.

For Jill and Travis, the awards were for a culmination of years of involvement and hard work. But each year, new members join the club. As an incentive for the new members who show promise through diligently completing record books, raising show animals, and enthusiasm for their projects, novice awards are given.

The Novice Shepherd Award went to 9-year-old Stephanie Kauffman. Daughter of Ellen Lewis of Mount Joy, Stephanie has worked with sheep ever since she was a toddler. This year, she excelled in showing Southdowns.

The Red Rose 4-H Rookie Award went to Katie Nolt, for demonstrating outstanding hard-work and enthusiasm during her first year of showing beef. Katie is the daughter of E.G. and Charlene Nolt of New Holland.

Despite hard work and perseverance, not every member is able to win a trophy or a blue ribbon. The Go-Getter Award was given to Amanda Grube, who didn't accumulate a lot of ribbons, but who demonstrated enthusiasm and diligence in projects. Twelve-year-old Amanda is the daughter of Tim and Roxanne Grube of Elizabethtown.

The meat judging team took first place in the state and members Radell Peters, Jessica Schmidt, Sara Strickler, and Dale Livengood were recognized for their outstanding performance.

For 30 years, Bud Dean has served as a 4-H livestock leader. Dean was presented with a plaque in appreciation for his years of service.

The awards and trophies are possible through the generosity of donors. The club expressed its gratitude some of these patrons. These included Dorothy Heistand, who gave money in honor of her late husband and to Dorothy Metzler and her family, and for creating a memorial fund to benefit livestock judging program. About $2,500 was received from the fund, and Mrs. Metzler promised to match the total with another gift next year.

A special appreciation award was given to the family of Bill MacCauley Jr. MacCauley, who passed away last week after a long battle with cancer, was well known as a shepherd, a judge, a 4-H lamb buyer, an award donor, and for hosting 4-H meetings and livestock judging practices on his farm in neighboring Chester County. Accepting the award were his wife Joan, daughter Nancy Frey and her children Billy and Betsy.

Tributes were paid to graduating members who can no longer be part of the livestock club. Included were members Keith Bollinger, Amy Hoffines, Regina Landis, Sara Strickler, Ryan Tracy, and Gerald Boyd.

In appreciation for his 30 years as a 4-H livestock leader, Bud Dean receives a plaque from 4-H agents Katina Showman, center, and Lori Little.

Soupy Secrets From The Expert

different kinds of dried beans that can be mixed or substituted in recipes. Do not add salt or tomatoe juice to the beans until they are tender.

• Soup can be thickened with pureed vegetables.

• Baked vegetable soup can be made by using a baked onion soup recipe and substituting vegetables for onion.

Letie demonstrated making several different varieties of soup for participants to sample. Here are some of the recipes.

CHEDDAR CHICKEN CHOWDER

Cooking spray
1 pound skinned, boned chicken breast, cut into bite-size pieces
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup diced red bell pepper
2 garlic cloves, minced
4½ cups fat-free chicken broth
1¼ cups diced peeled red potatoes
2¼ cups frozen whole-kernel corn
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 cups low-fat milk
¾ cup shredded cheddar cheese
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook bacon in a Dutch oven coated with cooking spray over medium-high heat until crisp. Remove bacon from pan. Crumble: set aside. Add chicken, onion, bell pepper, and garlic to bacon fat in pan; saute 5 minutes. Add broth and potatoes; bring to a boil. Cover, reduce heat, and simmer 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Add corn; stir well.

Place flour in a bowl. Gradually add milk, stirring with whisk until blended; add to soup. Cook over meidum heat 15 minutes or until thick, stirring frequently. Stir in cheese, salt, and pepper. Top with crumbled bacon. Yield: 7 servings.

CHICKEN CORN RIVVEL SOUP

4 pounds chicken, including bones
1 medium onion, chopped
3-4 stalks celery, chopped
3 quarts water
1 to 2 teaspoons seasoned salt
Freshly ground black pepper
¼ teaspoon saffron (optional)
2 cups fresh cut corn
2 cups flour
2 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons parsley

Place chicken, onion, celery, in a large kettle. Cover with about 3 quarts water. Add seasoning. Stew until tender. Remove meat and cool. Cut corn into broth and cook until tender. If the broth is fatty, skim or refrigerate overnight. Remove the fat cake the next morning and proceed. Remove skin and bones and chop meat fine. Put meat back into broth. Bring to a boil.

For rivvels: Mix flour and salt in a small dish. Beat eggs with a fork. Pour a little at a time into the flour and rub together with your fingers. The little wads or lumps that form are the rivvels. When the broth is boiling, scatter the rivvels into the soup and cook for about 15 minutes. Do not add in the loose flour that is lefover. This will cause the broth to thicken like gravy. If you don't want lots of rivvels, make only one cup flour with one egg.

Before serving, season to taste and add parsley.

ANTIBIOTICS DAMAGE THE IMMUNE SYSTEM
Vitamix FEEDS THE IMMUNE SYSTEM
You Can Sell The Milk
When You Use Vitamix Instead Of Antibiotics

'Vitamix is for every contagious disease & every kind of infection. Support the immune system their lives depend on it.

You can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix. Vitamix is a mixture of vitamins, minerals, enzymes, electrolytes, and proteins, especially calculated to feed the immune system. Vitamix is the result of over 20 years research and over 20,000 feeding experiments. Vitamix ingredients are so micro pulverized and easily digestible that some of them melt in the mouth and are absorbed into the bloodstream while the cow is still chewing her feed. Her organs increase the output of antibodies (white cells) within minutes, and can often double the output of antibodies within one hour after consuming Vitamix, and you can get Vitamix without a prescription. Vitamix is all natural. You just put Vitamix in the feed whenever there are symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

The cow's immune system can cure any and every kind of contagious disease and infection quicker, safer, more consistently than any medical drug in the world when you support the immune system. The immune system is the only real defense. I keep cows and horses for feeding experiments.The last tlme I used an antibiotic was in 1984 and haven't lost a cow, calf or horse since I quit using antibiotics.

Any time any human or animal gets a contagious disease or any kind of infection, it is for one reason, and one reason only; The immune system failed to do an adequate job of defending against it. In other words, the immune system let you down.

Every time you use antibiotics, sulfa drug or an immune stimulator; you weaken the immune system. See the Physicians Desk Reference (PDR) for more information on the side effects of antibiotics. The information in the PDR was provided by the drug companies that make the drugs as required by law.

Shouldn't we be feeding the immune system instead? Support the immune system. Their lives and health depend on it. Feed Vitamix every time for every contagious disease or infection.

Vitamix is the best procedure in the world for Mastitis. It is quick and easy and you can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix.

How long does it take when you take the "Support the immune system approach?" I have seen calves that were down, had high fever, bloody scours and were dehydrated. One needed help to hold its head up. The only thing I gave them was Vitamix and water. In three hours, I had to run them down and get them cornered to give the Vitamix. Dairymen tell me that Vitamix is faster than anything else they ever used.

When there is a serious case of anything contagious or infectious; I give Vitamix once an hour for three hours, or until they are back on their feed and doing noticeably better. I continue Vitamix six times daily for a few days. Vitamix typically costs only $2 to $3 a day for a cow (less for a calf). The total cost for one cow for one illness is typically $8 to $10 from start to finish.

Vitamix costs less than antibiotics, and you can get it without a prescription. Vitamix is completely drug free!!! You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix!!! (When you use antibiotics, you pour the milk out for 5 days, sometimes more. You risk making a mistake and pouring all your milk out for 5 days or more.)

You save money Every Time you use Vitamix. Get some Vitamix now to keep on hand. Use Vitamix as soon as you see symptoms of anything contagious or infectious. You will know you did the right thing within hours.

Preventing and curing all contagious disease and infections boils down to this. Increasing the capacity to produce white cells (Antibodies). All white cells are made by the bone marrow. Antibiotics cause "bone marrow depression" thereby reducing its ability to make white cells to fight diseases and infection (See Physician's Desk Reference Book [PDR]).

I have done over 20,000 feeding experiments on healing the body, and have yet to find an incurable contagious disease or infection.

Why sit around waiting for a miracle? You can order Vitamix right now. Miracles are great and they do happen now and then; if you wait around one might happen for you. But the immune system is a miracle. You can order Vitamix today and keep it on hand, then you will have it when you need it.

Vitamix ...when you need a miracle. The best source of information about Vitamix is people who have used it. Ask a friend about Vitamix.

Kids "got milk?"

PITTSBURGH - In a major effort to help end the two-decade decline in fluid milk consumption, Dairy Management Inc, along with the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and other state/regional promotion programs, launched an $81 million fluid milk marketing campaign designed to persuade children to drink more milk.

"DMI's consumer Segmentation Study conducted last year convinced us that children are among the most promising consumer segments in helping us increase fluid milk sales," said Scott Higgins, CEO of the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East

PDPP contracts with ADADC Mid East to conduct advertising, marketing, nutrition education and promotion on behalf of dairy farmers in western Pennsylvania.

Market research shows that children 1 to 11 are the biggest milk drinkers, but that consumption drops off greatly after that. DMI and PDPP hope that helping children choose milk now will result in them forming a life-long milk habit.

"Using an integrated marketing approach to convince children that milk is an attractive beverage will go a long way toward reaching our goal of halting the decline in fluid milk consumption," Higgins said

The integrated marketing campaign features "got milk?" advertising with a new twist

Earlier this month, new television commercials, featuring story lines written by and for children, began running on various cable and network children's programming during weekday breakfast hours, after school and on weekend mornings.

"The purpose of the new "got milk?" advertising is to raise kid's awareness of milk and position it as a contemporary, 'cool' beverage," Higgins said "The ads, which assume a kid's point of view, pose the question; what happens in a world where milk is taken away? We want kids to think, 'I need milk right now - nothing else will do."

DMI and PDPP have additional strategies in the overall plan to reach children 1 to 11, including:

•Sponsoring research that reinforces the value of milk products as the preferred source of children's calcium.

•Conducting a new school breakfast promotion campaign which stresses the importance of a breakfast that includes dairy as essential to learning.

•Working with school food-service personnel to properly handle milk.

•Identifying new flavors, formulations and other marketing opportunities for milk-based beverages, to help overcome barriers to increased consumption.

In addition, starting in April dairy farmer funds will sponsor "Wimzie's House," a Public Broadcasting System television show aimed at 2-to 5-year-olds

Furthermore, fluid milk marketing efforts in 1998 extend beyond children to reach teens and those adults who currently drink only one glass of milk a day.

An additional $100 million in milk processor dollars will be applied to a major campaign targeting the teen and adult groups, identified in the DMI Segmentation Study as critical to increasing overall fluid milk consumption

"By pooling resources and implementing one, coordinated plan with MilkPEP, dairy farmers now have the firepower to successfully compete with soft drink manufactures and other beverage competitors trying to win the hearts and minds of consumers, including children," Higgins said.

This strategy, spearheaded by the new "got milk"? campaign, allows the fluid milk industry to become the major player in the beverage industry in marketing to children."

Since the national dairy farmer check-off program began in 1984, dairy promotion organizations have helped increase total annual dairy sales by 33 billion pounds, a 27 percent increase

Convention To Explore Issues Impacting Producers

DENVER, Colo. — "Family Agriculture In A Changing World" is the theme of National Farmers Union's (NFU) 96th Anniversary Convention set March 6-9, in Albuquerque, N.M.

Convention-goers will consider the impact on family producers brought by changes in federal farm policy, domestic market structure, and international trade.

"The success of family producers today is affected by everything from federal policies to the Tokyo stock market," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "This year's convention will focus on these issues and explore what producers can do to influence federal policy changes, as well as to take advantage of today's market opportunities."

Among the highlights of the convention are a series of workshops that will be offered Saturday afternoon, March 7. Workshop topics will include tax code changes affecting agricultural producers; the U.S. food supply system and how it impacts producers, the environment and consumers; the renaissance of the cooperative development movement; and overcoming stress to work effectively with others. Saturday's session will also feature a round table discussion of representatives from various commodity and other producer organizations.

Sunday's agenda, March 8, will include a non-denominational worship service and convention business in the morning, followed by an afternoon free for sightseeing and relaxation. Sunday evening, delegates and members will reconvene for the convention banquet, which will feature an address by Canadian Farmers Union President Nettie Wiebe.

Monday, March 9, will be reserved for Farmers Union delegates to consider NFU policy. NFU's 1998 Policy Committee met in Denver in December to begin consideration of 1998 policy. The committee will offer its proposals to the full delegation, which will debate and adopt NUF policy for 1998.

Parents are encouraged to bring their children to convention. A complete youth program will be offered at a nominal fee. Convention registration is open to anyone. State-elected delegates will decide the organization's business, including election of officers and adoption of the 1998 policy program.

Farm Bureau: Agriculture Helped, Hurt In Budget

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau this week announced its opinion on the governor's proposed budget — it has some "pluses and minuses" for agriculture, according to Guy F. Donaldson, Farm Bureau president.

"It was a plus to see a $1.3 million increase in general operations for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture budget," Donaldson said, "because this increase means that vital regulatory programs and staff will not be cut."

He cited the $2.5 million budgeted to carry out the nutrient management program as another plus, along with the half million dollar increase for ag research.

The farm spokesman praised the $44 million allocated to preserve farmland in Pennsylvania, and the $3 million to oversee diagnostic research facilities and to monitor animal health by the Animal Health Commission.

The Veterinary College at the University of Pennsylvania received a million-dollar increase to help run the only veterinary school in the state.

An area of major concern to the Farm Bureau is that Pennsylvania State University Ag Extension and Research received a small increase, which was mostly offset by decreasing federal dollars for this vital program.

The PFB is seeking an increase of 8 percent versus the 3.5 percent provided by the Ridge budget.

The second area of concern was the lack of any increase going to conservation district programs.

Another big minus, according to Donaldson, is the failure to fund the ag loan forgiveness program.

Under the program, college graduates, who returned to the farm could apply to have a portion of their college loan forgiven.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a non-government, voluntary organization which represents more than 25,000 farm and rural families. It has 54 county Farm Bureaus and is affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Farm Bureau Testifies For "Farmstead" Property Tax Relief

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — A statewide farm organization is urging that property tax relief for farmers be added to any tax reform measure enacted by the General Assembly to implement the "homestead" property tax exemption.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is urging lawmakers to add a "farmstead" exemption to the property tax relief legislation they will be considering for taxpayers.

Pennsylvania voters approved an amendment to the state Constitution in a referendum last fall which cleared the way for passage of a "homestead" tax exemption. It would allow municipalities, school districts and counties to exempt part of the assessed value of a taxpayer's home from property taxes. The exemption would be limited to no more than one-half of the median assessed value of homes in a taxing district. Local governments would be able to replace the lost revenues through other sources such as local income or sales taxes approved by voters.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau supported passage of the "homestead" referendum with the understanding that a "farmstead" exemption would be added to the final tax reform package.

In testimony today before the state House Finance Committee, a spokesman for the farm organization explained why farmers need additional tax relief measures. John Bell, counsel of Governmental Affairs for PFB, said farmers pay a disproportionate share of local property taxes under the present system because of the large amounts of land and buildings needed to operate their businesses. Limiting tax reform strictly to a "homestead" exemption on a taxpayer's home will not bring much relief to farmers, he said.

The value of a farm house often comprises only a small portion of the farm's total tax assessment. In addition, when compared to houses in residential neighborhoods, the value of a farm residence and its surrounding grounds is often very low. "If property eligible for tax relief is limited to the residence and accessory grounds, the comparably low farm home values will prevent farm families from receiving tax relief that other residents will be able to receive," Bell testified, "even though those farm families pay more property taxes."

Tax relief on top of a "homestead" exemption for homes must be provided to farm families, Bell said. He made the following points in explaining how Farm Bureau would like to see a "farmstead" exemption operate:

Farm Bureau does not recommend that all farms receive "farmstead property tax relief, "Only those farms which serve as the primary residence of the owner of the farm would be eligible for relief," Bell stated. "This limitation would direct relief to family farm operations, who deserve and need tax relief the most."

"Farmstead" property eligible for tax relief would include the buildings and structures which are primarily used to facilitate the farm operation. Examples would include buildings and structures used to produce commodities, house animals, store farm products or supplies, or to store farm machinery or equipment.

"Farmstead" tax relief should not be treated as merely an extension of the "homestead" exemption. "We believe that the 'farmstead' relief should be relief which is separate from and in addition to the relief that the resident farm family would otherwise receive for homestead property," Bell said. "To use an example, if a farm family has a farm with a house assessed at $20,000 and farm buildings assessed at $100,000 in a taxing district in which half the median value of homestead property is $20,000, the farm family should not only receive homestead relief on the farm house, but additional tax relief on the farm buildings."

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a voluntary, non-governmental organization which represents 25,247 farm and rural families.

Conference To Examine Ag's Future

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — U.S. Congressman Wayne Gilchrest of Maryland will headline a two-day conference on the economic and environmental future of Mid-Atlantic agriculture that is expected to draw scores of farmers and agriculture groups, agencies, educators, and researchers to the Eastern Shore of Maryland in March.

Titled "Ag Alternatives '98 — Farming for a Better Tomorrow," the conference on March 3 and 4 in the main auditorium of Chesapeake College in Wye Mills, Md., will focus on agriculture in Maryland and Delaware and how it can meet the growing economic and environmental challenges it faces. The Future Harvest Project, a 4-year-old effort by local farmers and residents and agricultural and environmental groups to foster and promote the economic, environmental, and social sustainability of area agriculture, is sponsoring the event.

"Today food is expected not only to be affordable but also to be produced in a safe and environmentally responsible way," said Michael Heller, Future Harvest Project director. "To that end, this conference will provide informatoin not only on innovative production and marketing options available to farmers, but also on new and improved farming practices and techniques that safeguard the quality of our soil, water, air, and other natural resources."

Gilchrest, who has long championed farmland protection and other agricultural conservation issues in the U.S. Congress, will speak on "Stewardship and Land Ethics in Our Farming and Natural Environment." Other prominent speakers and topics will be Drs. Russ Brinsfield and Ken Staver of the University of Maryland Wye Research and Education Center on the controversial issue of "Nitrogen and Phosphorous Transport from Agriculture to the Bay," Dr. Fred Magdoff, professor of agronomy at the University of Vermont and one of the nation's most respected soil scientists on "Soil Quality and Soil Health, Ann Harvey Yonkers, Washington Post food writer, farmers' market manager, and distributor of fresh fruits and vegetables, who will moderate a panel (four growers and a chef) discussion on "Successful Direct Marketing — What Really Works," Dr. Michael Kemp, Chesapeake Bay water quality expert and University of Maryland professor, on agriculture's impact on the bay, and Tim Bowser, co-chair of the national Campaign for Sustainable Agriculture and executive director of the Pennsylvania Association of Sustainable Agriculture, on the new directions of agriculture and formation of a local organization to help shape its future here.

Other topics to be addressed include the latest environmentally safe farming production practices for organic grains and vegetables.

The conference is open to the public Registration is $40, including lunch on both days. Interested registrants should contact Robin Haggie at the Chesapeake Wildlife Heritage, (410) 822-5100, or Mark Davis at Delaware State University, (302) 739-6946, or send a $40 check in care of Chesapeake Wildlife Heritage, PO Box 1745, Easton, MD 21601. The plant will close by March 31, 1998, affecting 10 employees. Purina Mills will retain ownership of this facility for potential future production of a specialized line of products.

"This transfer is the result of the migration of commercial agriculture from the Richmond marketplace and the need to manufacture our products at more modern and efficient locations," said John Zerbe, Eastern Regional vice president.

Dairy Of Distinction Program Again Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from a roadside point of view. Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during your local June Dairy Month activities.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

For New York State applications are available from Carol Keene, RD 1, Box 31, Gilbertsville, NY 13776. Phone: (607) 783-2169.

For New Jersey applications, send to: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (908) 735-4989.

All applications must be completed and returned to your state secretary by Wednesday, April 15, 1998.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from Penn State Cooperative Extensi.on.

Dairy of Distinction 1998 Pennsylvania Application

Dairy of Distinction

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane). Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that; if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1). The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2). The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket shou'd be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3). Sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4). Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
5). Replacement of damaged signs shall be the discretion of the committee.
6). No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expense.
7). Judges' decisions will be final.
8). Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9). Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10). Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.

CASE IH

CONSIGNMENT AUCTION
Of Farm Equipment
Saturday, March 28

Case IH is offering low 3.9% financing for 36 months on Case IH planting, seeding and soil preparation equipment.

This special offer is good on Case IH Early Riser planters, grain drills, disk harrows, field cultivators and more.

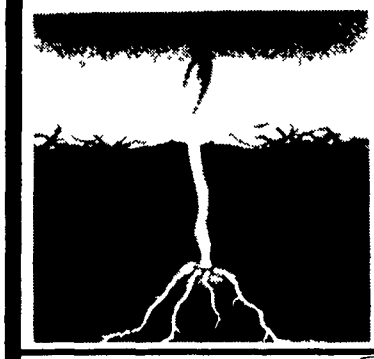
Case IH 4300 Field Cultivator

Tillage Practices Change. A Seed's Requirements Do Not.



An Early Riser Planter Is "The Germinator"

Remember What's most important is the combination of planting to moisture, uniform depth control, seed-to-soil contact, uniform soil pressure, accurate population and seed spacing.

Early Riser planter makes a difference.

That means a one- to seven-day faster emergence, a 7 bu. per acre average yield advantage in corn

In Stock - Case IH 950 Planter w/No Till Liquid or Dry w/Insecticide

Herbert Hoover Farney says, "I didn't think they could mix it."

Steve, Dale, and Herbert Hoover Farney
Silvery Falls Farms - Lowville, NY

Mr Farney is talking about mixing 11.5% long stem dry hay by ration weight in the Knight Reel Auggie 3450, which he and his sons decided to purchase in September of 1994.

Herbert was born the day Herbert Hoover was elected president.

The Farneys previously owned a three-auger Oswalt stationary unit. They state that the "old mixer tended to ball material up, especially in wetter forages, while the Reel Auggie 3450 'fluffs' the ration."

The Farney's herd average is up about 1,000 lbs., and they have a higher protein test as well. They milk 160 Holsteins, and feed a total of 260 head. They like the low power requirement — the 390 cubic foot machine is powered by a John Deere 2030 tractor.

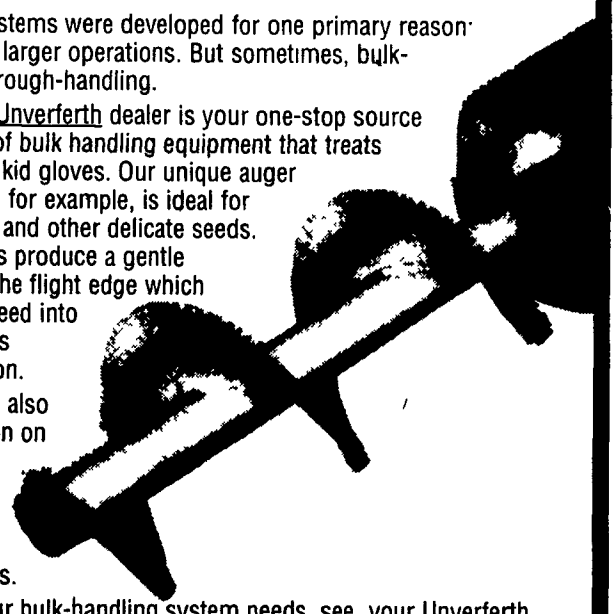
When It Comes To Handling Seed Grains, Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc. Invites You To

TRY A LITTLE

TENDERNESS

Bulk-handling systems were developed for one primary reason: greater efficiency in larger operations. But sometimes, bulk-handling can mean rough-handling.

That's why your Unverferth dealer is your one-stop source for a complete line of bulk handling equipment that treats seed and grain with kid gloves. Our unique auger with brush-flighting, for example, is ideal for movement of beans and other delicate seeds. The compact bristles produce a gentle sweeping action at the flight edge which smoothly conveys seed into the planter and limits varietal contamination.



Brush-flighting is also available as an option on Unverferth's 6-inch truck and grain box augers that serve your planting and harvesting needs.

In fact, for all your bulk-handling system needs, see your Unverferth dealer today. Because a little tenderness can take you a long way.

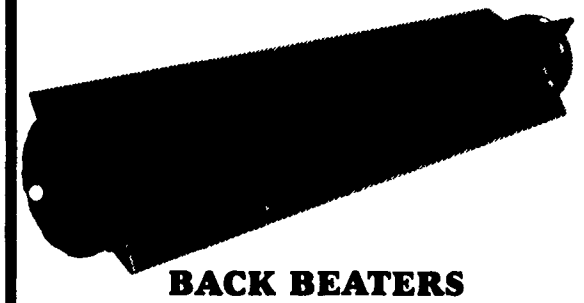
AGCO COMBINE RE-NEW COMPONENTS

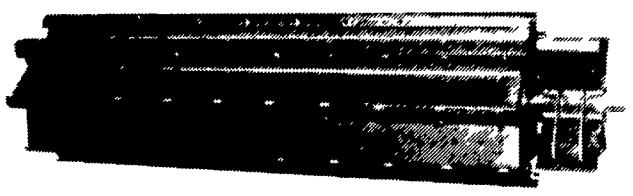
RE-NEW YOUR WORN OUT COMBINE COMPONENTS NOW AND BRING YOUR MACHINE UP TO PEAK PERFORMANCE

Concaves, Cylinders/Rotors, Rub Bars & Back Beaters
Accessories that are New, Not Re-manufactured, components for all makes applications



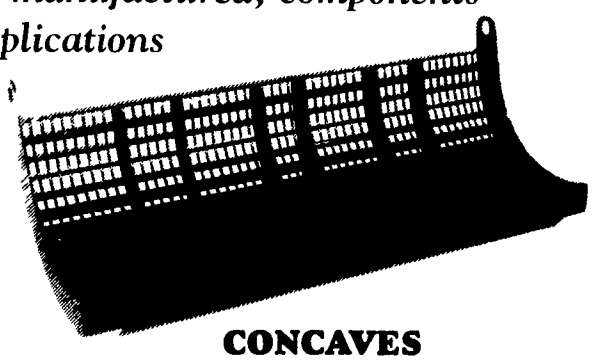
BACK BEATERS

Engineered with deep "V" design to increase material flow and reduce back-feeding. With 4-blade construction to eliminate "Wall-of-Steel" caused by more blades. Heavy-duty Deep "V" Back Beaters are available for: White, John Deere, CCIL and Gleaner combines.



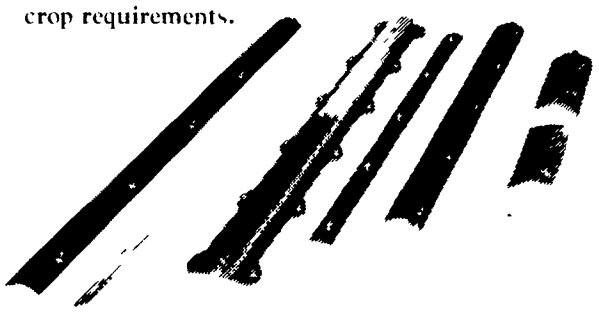
HI-INERTIA ENCLOSED CYLINDERS/ROTORS

Hi-Inertia Cylinders/Rotors seal out dust and chaff, eliminate trash build-up and reduce out-of-balance vibration. Engineered with more weight to maintain R.P.M. for less "Slugging" and lowered speed for less grain damage. Available for: Gleaner Series L,M N & R, Claas w/52" & 62" Cylinders, Massey Ferguson 8450 & 8460 and John Deere Series 6600 thru 9600.



CONCAVES

Re-new worn out combine components with heavy-duty in-line rotary, conventional or tranverse rotary concaves. The heavy-duty construction reduces flexing and maintains a constant cylinder/concave gap. Most are available in wide or narrow spacing so you can mix or match for your crop requirements.



SELECT PERFORMANCE RUB BARS

Choose steel forged black for economy and delicate or rocky conditions. Select hard chromed for long lasting wear in abrasive soil conditions. Available for many brands and models. Or use chromium imbedded cast for Gleaner Series L & M and IH or Case IH rotaries. All rub bars feature precision machined mounting points and include grade 8 mounting hardware.

Tomato Growers Honored

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's 1997 tomato growing champions were honored on Tuesday, Jan. 27 during the Tomato Awards Luncheon at the 1998 Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference and Trade Show at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

The State Champion Tomato Growers' Club annually recognizes growers who produce outstanding yields of tomatoes for processing. It is sponsored by The Pennsylvania State University Cooperative Extension Service and Furman Foods, Northumberland. Top growers in the different classes receive an engraved plaque for their high tomato production and record-keeping practices during the "Tomato Day" session of the Vegetable Growers Conference.

The aims of the Champion Tomato Growers' Club are to stimulate interest in growing tomatoes for processing in the state, to encourage growers to adopt practices which will enable them to effectively produce the best yields of high quality tomatoes, to promote a closer feeling of cooperation between tomato growers and the processors, and to give recognition annually to those growers producing outstanding yields.

Tough Potato Pests Face Newer, Tougher Insecticides

WOOSTER, Ohio — Potato growers need new strategies for the entire complex of pests that attack potato crops, and they may find these at the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress, February 4-6 in Toledo.

Ohio State University's Casey Hoy, who works at the Wooster campus of the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, will be speaking at this year's Congress. His session "New Options and Shifting Strategies for Potato Pest Control" will address a primary concern of the potato industry. They need stronger, more innovative strategies to conquer potato pests.

"New insecticides are soon going to enter the marketplace," Hoy said. "They tend to be safer than older insecticides for both farmers and the environment."

Hoy said many of these new chemicals can be used together with biological and cultural controls more effectively than older insecticides.

A systemic insecticide called imidacloprid (Admire), is put in the soil at planting. The insecticide controls aphids all year, as well as the first generation of Colorado potato beetle. Hoy said it's a very effective insecticide, and it's relatively safe. It has little effect on beneficial insects that my be residing in potato fields.

The problem with imidacloprid—and other insecticides used at planting—is that farmers can't determine whether it is really necessary. Sometimes these insecticides aren't used because no visible problems exist at planting. They arise later—and then it's too late for the farmer to use these solutions.

Imidacloprid insecticides have been used extensively for three years now, and Hoy said farmers must be concerned about the beetles developing resistance. Other pests like the potato leafhopper and European corn borer are not controlled completely by imidacloprid—they require additional sprays.

As new insecticides and biological and cultural practices make their way into the industry, farmers must determine the best methods for use. When, where and what effects these solutions have on the pests and the environment must be taken into consideration.

"In the end, it's up to the growers to decide how to use these new materials," Hoy said. "We'll use our time at Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress to share what we know about these new insecticides."

Hoy also hopes to discuss, as a group, economically and environmentally beneficial ways for potato growers to use new insecticides as they become available. Finding the best methods for pest control-methods that protect the pocketbook and the environment—is the key to success for Ohio's potato growers and others in the fruit and vegetable industry.

Three bedroom two story home, two story barn for heifers and calves, machinery building. 320 acres, 250 tillable. The farm has a great location for someone wanting to milk and purchase feed. Present owner has health problems and is anxious to sell. Farm is listed for $340,000. Owner will consider all reasonable offers.
